Amin Flees As Kampala Falls

KAMPALA — Uganda's capital fell to an invasion force of Tanzanians and Ugandan exiles early today. Residents greeted the "liberators" with flowers and bananas and by beating some of President Idi Amin's remaining troops to death.

Amin was reported to have fled Kampala on Tuesday for his new headquarters in Jinja, 80 kilometres to the east, and some unconfirmed reports said he headed even farther eastward to Tororo, near the border with Kenya.

A telephone operator in Kampala told Radio Luxembourg Amin was hoping Iraqi, Syrian and Saudi Arabian commandos would help him recapture Kampala.

Loudspeakers urged Ugandan troops still holding out to surrender and residents were told to stay indoors until the city of 400,000 was totally secure.

But the Kampalans took to the streets at daybreak and a carnival atmosphere prevailed as they kissed their conquerors and chanted "Nyerere Only!" and "Nyerere, Nyerere!" referring to Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere.

They also swarmed over tanks that led the Tanzanians into the outskirts of the city, looted stores and offered the booty to the invaders and beat knots of Ugandan soldiers to death.

Lt. Col. Awaiti Ojok, the Ugandan exile military commander took to the airwaves of Radio Kampala and proclaimed: "The lying racist, fascist regime is no longer in power."

Sources in the Tanzanian capital of Dar Es Salaam said they expected members of the government in exile, led by scholar Youssef Lule, to arrive in Kampala in the next few days, even if Amin fought on in the provinces.

Lule already has announced that he will rule Uganda for two years, then hold national elections to establish a permanent government.

The invaders started into Kampala on Tuesday afternoon after a night-long artillery bombardment, followed by a fierce rocket, artillery and jet fighter aircraft attack in the morning and early afternoon. Despite the heavy bombardment, there was little visible damage to homes and commercial buildings.

The Tanzanian column from the south was commanded by spear-brandishing Lt.-Col. Ben Msekwa, who ran ahead of his troops to lead them whenever resistance was encountered. Heavy automatic weapons fire was poured into pockets of Ugandan holdouts, silencing them.

The Tanzanians and their Ugandan allies completed their penetration of the city during the night, charging isolated groups of Amin's troops in attacks launched by bugle calls.

"About 5 p.m., the brigades entered the city and got fire from small groups of five to 10 Ugandan soldiers," he said. "The Tanzanians fired back very heavily, with artillery, tanks, maching-guns and very quickly disposed of the pockets.

Secret Deal — Stephens

Tory leader Vic Stephens today gave details of what he said is a backroom deal between the provincial Socreds and the federal Conservative party.

Under the secret deal, the Socreds received a pledge that the federal Conservative party would not support the provincial wing of the party in the B.C. election.

In return, the Socreds promised cash for Conservative federal candidates.

Stephens said he was shocked and disturbed to learn of the threats and immediately took the information to federal Tory leader Joe Clark, who "nodded his head to confirm he knew of the situation."

In Vancouver, Premier Bill Bennett brushed aside Stephens' claims.

Bennett categorically denied any deal was made with the federal Tories.

The premier said he wants a public apology from Stephens "for these untrue remarks".

Asked if it was possible that such a deal could have been made within the Socred party, the premier said if any such agreement had been made, it did not come from his office.

Socred provincial president Les Keen also denied any deal was made with the federal Tories.

Stephens told a North Vancouver news conference the federal Conservative party has given in to the Socreds.

He said Clark acknowledged the existence of the situation during a brief meeting of the Conservative leaders when their election campaign paths crossed last week in Kamloops.

At that time, Clark refused to publicly endorse or back the provincial Tories in the B.C. campaign.

"There's a conspiracy in B.C. by the monied Social Credit party backers to prevent voters from having a free choice," Stephens said.

Killer Twisters Devastate Texas-Oklahoma Border

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (UPI) — National Guardsmen and police watching for looters patrolled streets jammed with mangled cars and debris today while workers began the grisly process of removing bodies from beneath tornado-smashed buildings.

At least 50 people, 34 of them in this oil city of 100,000, were killed by the twisters that strafed communities along the Texas-Oklahoma border Tuesday evening and injured more than 600 in the area known as "tornado alley."

There was some confusion early today as to whether one or two tornadoes had hit Wichita Falls. Some said two funnel clouds merged into one with two tails.

While hospital employees worked under emergency power in a frantic effort to treat bloody victims jamming emergency rooms, law enforcement authorities faced the major task of keeping looters out of both devastated areas and sections left unprotected by lawmen responding to the emergency.

"Besides the casualties, the worst problem is the looting," said police administrative assistant Don Pilcher in Wichita Falls.

Looting also was reported in other communities, but only Wichita Falls authorities reported "several arrests" of people who smashed in windows and tried to escape with television sets, jewelry and other merchandise.

Dozens of bodies were at a temporary morgue by early today, and authorities feared the death toll would mount steadily as the search for victims in the twisters' four-block wide, six-mile-long path continued.

Officials said they had not even begun looking through the rubble of what had been apartment complexes.

Noise Adds 20 Years?

TORONTO (CP) — Industrial noise can accelerate the effects of natural aging by as much as 20 years, says a Toronto ear, nose and throat specialist.

"Industrial noise can be such an overwhelming experience for some that a 40-year-old man can look like a 60-year-old," Dr. Peter Alberti of Mount Sinai Hospital told a conference on industrial accident prevention Tuesday.

Excessive noise can accelerate aging by destroying the capacity of the ear to transform sound vibrations into nervous impulse which, in turn, results in an inability to hear high frequencies.

"You lose the ability to tune in and out at will and can't make out what people are saying in crowd situations. It' all a jumble."

While strong unions in the North are alert to the problem and are forcing the issue, workers in industrial areas of southern Ontario and British Columbia are just waking up to the problem, he said.

Prisoners Barricade Court Cell

Victoria provincial court proceedings were delayed for almost an hour today when prisoners barricaded themselves in a holding cell at the Law Courts building.

An investigation is underway into the incident, which started about 9.15 a.m.

The barricade was thrown up after deputy sheriffs tried to put a prisoner into a cell which already held 10 other prisoners.

The prisoners tore up a bench and table in the cell and used it to barricade themselves inside the cell.

The barricade was taken down and the incident ended after about 20 minutes of negotiations.

Auxiliaries Quitting RCMP

Hundreds of auxiliary RCMP members have withdrawn their services because the government has failed to protect them against lawsuits arising out their work.

The crunch in the Victoria area could come tonight when the Colwood RCMP auxiliary group meets to discuss a withdrawal of service.

Sgt. Mel Stern, officer in charge of the auxiliary program in the province, said nine other groups have already suspended services.

They include those in Duncan, Courtenay, Chase, Kelowna, Langley, Abbotsford, 100 Mile House, Williams Lake and Coquitlam.

There are 1,350 auxiliaries attached to 128 detachments throughout the province.

Although the auxiliary program has been in existence for 16 years, it was only last week members learned the government will not cover them if they are involved in mishaps on patrols or become involved in civil actions arising out of their work.

Const. Elton Deans, supervisor of the auxiliary program in Colwood, said the loss of the auxiliaries could have far-reaching implications.

At present the 17 members contribute 800 hours of volunteer work a month, providing crowd control and security at Western Speedway, helping regular officers patrol high crime areas, and assisting in crime prevention programs.

Superintendent George Scott of RCMP headquarters in Victoria said that efforts are being made to resolve the problem.

He said auxiliaries are appointed under the Emergency Measures Act and as such are not entitled to liability coverage that is extended to members of the regular force who are appointed as servants of the crown.

He noted that in the past 16 years there has never been a liability issue involving an auxiliary member although he said he could sympathize with their concern.

"Until we can get them some sort of liability insurance we are telling them they can't drive patrol cars, carry firearms and that in matters of possible civil action we are warning them to be careful," he said.

Grits on Skids — Poll

Times News Services

A majority of Canadians believed three weeks before the May 22 federal election was called that the Liberal Party would get fewer votes and the Conservatives more votes than they did in 1974, a Gallup poll released today shows.

A thousand adult Canadians were asked if they thought the three major political parties would do better or worse in a new election than in 1974.

A majority — 56 per cent — believed the Liberals would lose votes while 54 per cent — believed the Conservatives would gain.

In 1978, when a similar poll was taken, 40 per cent believed the Liberals would lose votes and 37 per cent believed the Conservatives would gain.

The New Democratic Party would gain more votes this election, 32 per cent of those surveyed believe. In 1978, only 23 per cent believed the NDP would gain at the polls.

In campaigning Tuesday, Prime Minister Trudeau won plaudits from Calgary oilmen for his speech concerning the petroleum industry.

Conservative leader Joe Clark, campaigning in the industrial and agricultural heartlands of Southern Ontario, hammered away on the theme of unemployment, saying that now it had become a "national sickness," rather than just a regional one.

'Shock Waves' as Parrot Convicted

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The conviction of postal union leader Jean-Claude Parrot "will send shock waves through the entire labor movement," said one glum union observer at Parrot's Ontario Supreme Court trial.

The jury found Parrot, president of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW), guilty of defying Parliament's back-to-work order last October.

Parrot said today he will work for the defeat of the Liberal government that charged him.

"Like the judge said, if you don't like it change the government, and that is something we are going to try to do," Parrot said as he left court after sentencing was set for May 7.

Parrot could get a maximum penalty of two years in prison.

In announcing the sentencing date, Mr. Justice Gregory Evans said Parrot can remain out of custody until then.

"I don't believe under the circumstances that I could have expected anything else under the present system," Parrot said concerning the outcome of the trial.

The conviction will spark demonstrations protesting the court decision, a CUPW spokesman said today.

Everet Hoogers, first vice-president of the union's Vancouver local, said although union members are angry CUPW doesn't expect any labor disruptions as a result.

"People are very upset about it," he said.

The question most people have been putting to him, Hoogers said, is "ask Trudeau if the jails are big enough to hold the thousands of people who support us."

Union members are saying the fact that Parrot has been convicted and may go to jail will in no way stop those in the public sector or private sector from fighting for their rights, Hoogers said.

"It has made us more determined than ever before to fight for what is rightfully ours."

He said CUPW people are not the only ones incensed by the court decision. There are telephone calls of support coming from other labor unions, he said.

The decision was a shock to most CUPW members because "we felt it was so obvious that our cause was a just one."

An angry CUPW leader in Calgary said the conviction could have an adverse effect on mail delivery in that city.

"I can't call a slowdown, but let's say none of our people will be very enthusiastic about their work," said Jim Hall, president of the 700-member Calgary local of the postal workers' union.

"People don't work for fun in the post office, they work for money," Hall said.

"We went on strike legally and the government went and manufactured laws to make us criminals."

Rockets Pound Two Israeli Towns

United Press International

Palestinians in southern Lebanon launched rockets at two northern Israeli towns today and Israel returned artillery fire in the first frontier clash since the signing of the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty.

The salvos of Soviet-made Katyusha rockets directed against Kiryat Shmona and coastal Nahariya came in retaliation for a punitive Israeli strike against Palestinian strongholds in southern Lebanon less than 24 hours earlier.

Official sources said rockets were fired on the coastal town of Nahariya after midnight, but there was no damage or injuries.

An Israeli military spokesman said one woman was slightly injured in today's attack by Soviet-made Katyusha rockets on the town of Kiryat Shmona, a frequent target of the Palestinians.

On Tuesday, the Egyptian Parliament formally ratified the peace treaty with Israel, one day before Jews around world gather to celebrate the holidy of Passover, which marks the Biblical exodus of Israelites from ancient Egypt.

Although no further constitutional measures are required following Cairo's parliamentary approval of the pact, President Anwar Sadat has decided to hold a national referendum to show Arab opponents the treaty has wide Egyptian support.

Sadat was scheduled to make a radio and television broadcast to the nation today to announce the date of plebiscite — probably next Sunday.

In Israel, a bomb exploded near a fish shop in Tel Aviv's crowded open-air Carmel market, killing one man and spraying shrapnel into crowds of people shopping for the Passover holiday that begins tonight. Police said 33 people were injured, five of them children.

"We knew beforehand that this would be the price of the peace agreement," said Tel Aviv Mayor Shlomo Lahat. "This is the price. We grieve, but in the end war costs more."

In quick retaliation, Israeli jets raided the Damour area, 13 miles south of Beirut, and the Ras Al Ain region near the Rashidieh Palestinian camp south of the Mediterranean port of Tyre.

U.S. Trucks To Roll Again

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Teamsters union and trucking companies are ready to roll again, ending a shutdown after reaching a tentative contract agreement that was reported to meet President Carter's anti-inflation guidelines.

"The strike and defensive shutdown (by the industry) are being terminated," chief U.S. government mediator Wayne Horvitz said shortly before midnight Tuesday as he announced a settlement in the 10-day work stoppage that has crippled North American auto industry.

"Procedures for return to work will be made within 24 hours," Horvitz said.

The new package would provide increases in wages, cost-of-living and fringe benefits estimated at 26 to 30 per cent over three years.

Union President Frank Fitzsimmons said he would recommend ratification by the union's 300,000 members covered by the pact. "I'm sure they'll be satisfied with this agreement; at least I hope so," Fitzsimmons said.

The union said it will take from four to six weeks to complete the ratification vote.

The two sides reached their agreement under the prodding of U.S. government mediators in a final marathon round of bargaining that stretched over two days.

The settlement puts an end to the longest industry-wide shutdown in North American history.

Begin Tries Hot Line

JERUSALEM (Reuter) — Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin inaugurated the new Jerusalem-Cairo "hot line" today with a five-minute telephone call to Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, a government spokesman reported.

The spokesman said only that Begin had initiated the call and that the two men had exchanged ideas.

Heart in Right Place

Roy Clark . . .strumming stilled

A 24-year-old man survived a bullet wound because his heart was on the wrong side, hospital sources in Rio de Janeiro said Tuesday. Gelson Alcides De Rosa Filho was admitted to the hospital last weekend after being shot in the back. The bullet came through his chest on the left side where the heart is normally located, but x-rays showed his heart was on the right side of his chest cavity.

In a landmark decision, the Idaho Industrial Commission says forcing a nonsmoker to work in a windowless office with three smokers is sufficient reason for the non-smoker to quit and look for another job. When secretary Ellen Meyer, 35, of Coeur d'Alene, quit her job at C.P. Clare Co., a Post Falls computer parts firm she said she couldn't stand to work in a small, enclosed room with heavy smokers. She was denied unemployment benefits so she engaged a lawyer, won her appeal and will get seven weeks' worth of jobless pay.

Announcer Alan Maitland was taken to hospital Tuesday after suffering pain in his arm and slurring his words while on the air during CBC radio's As It Happens program. He was listed in satisfactory condition today. Maitland, who complained of pains in his right arm, muffed a number of pronunciations and became obviously confused while he was on the air.

Two survivors of the February, 1978, crash of a Pacific Western Airlines jet at Cranbrook in which 43 people died will be awarded the Medal of Bravery, officials say. Gail Lois Bunn of Edmonton and David White of Calgary were walking away from the wreckage when they heard a young girl crying and went back to rescue her.

Canada's 32,000 registered blind people have until Monday to apply for two free tickets to the Rolling Stones' concert in Oshawa, Ont., later this month. Jim Sanders, a spokesman for the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, said Tuesday the tickets will be sold to the public only when organizers know the number of blind people attending. He said the entire Rolling Stones group would perform two concerts at Oshawa. The group's guitarist, Keith Richard, was ordered to play the concert after being convicted last fall of charges involving heroin possession.

Albert Finney and actress Diana Quick, who turned up in Quito, Ecuador, after being reported missing by friends, left Tuesday by plane for the United States. Earlier Tuesday, a spokesman for the Colon International Hotel said Finney and Quick arrived in Quito Monday night after having been reported missing while on a South American tour. The couple was first thought by friends to have become lost in the Amazon.

Dolly Parton, Tennessee's voluptuous contribution to country music, cannot escape jokes about her — even in the state legislature. The legislature voted this week to name a section of highway in the foothills of the great Smokey Mountains as the Dolly Parton Highway. Representative Clifford Henry noted that the portion of highway named after the singer is one of the flattest and straightest in the country. He thought it would be more fitting "to have something more mountainous and curvaceous."

Another country performer, Roy Clark, has been admitted to a clinic in Rochester, Minn. for treatment of a bronchial condition. Clark has been troubled by a bronchial infection and congestion for weeks and his doctors in his hometown of Tulsa said he needs total rest and medical supervision.

Also on the sick list, comedian Jerry Colonna is resting comfortably in serious but stable condition at a Los Angeles hospital after suffering an apparent heart attack in his home. Colonna, 74, partially paralyzed by a stroke in 1966, was taken by ambulance from his Studio City home Monday afternoon. The Boston-born comedian probably is best known for his bushy handlebar moustache, bulging eyes and his work with Bob Hope entertaining overseas troops.

Zambian Border Pounded Again

LUSAKA (Reuter) — Rhodesian planes today attacked targets near the southeast Zambian border town of Luangwa in the third Rhodesian raid into Zambia within 36 hours, informed sources said.

They said the action began at about 11 a.m. local time and still was going on two hours later. It is not known whether any ground forces were involved.

Hawker Hunter jet planes firing rockets hit three Rhodesian black nationalist camps a few kilometres west of Lusaka on Tuesday, killing one person and injuring six, Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda said.

Among the injured were two West German civilians staying at a farm near one of the camps. The farm also came under fire from the Rhodesian planes.

The Rhodesian military said its aircraft carried out a second raid Tuesday on black guerrilla base near Mulungushi, about 160 kilometres north of Lusaka.

But there is no confirmation of the second attack from Zambian or black guerrilla officials today.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 11, 1979

One reason why

The British Columbia government has pushed Ottawa to concede more control over broadcasting and telecommunications companies to the province. Premier Bill Bennett made it an issue in the 1975 election.

He said then that telephone rates and service can't be effectively regulated from 3,000 miles away. The telephone company is a natural monopoly, he said, and it should be "accessible to the people . . . and subject to their own provincial regulation."

The issue has been revived for the 1979 campaign; the throne speech last month said MLAs would be asked to endorse the principle of transferring authority over B.C. Tel to the province.

Broadcasters and B.C. Tel have been reluctant to endorse provincial regulation. They have their criticisms of the CRTC, but at least it is an adversary with whom they are familiar, and its regulations apply uniformly to the industry across provincial boundaries, as many broadcast companies operate across Canada or in several provinces.

Provincial regulation is a great unknown. At the federal level, there is a certain stability in administration, no matter which political party is in power. The CRTC is a semi-independent agency which is somewhat insulated from politics.

Bennett said last week he finds it hard to understand why provincial broadcasters are resisting provincial regulation.

He might find one of the clues to their reluctance in the curious way his speech announcing the election was aired on B.C. radio and television last week.

The premier's office had requested five minutes of air time for 6 p.m. last Tuesday afternoon so the premier could make an important announcement to the public. Everyone guessed he was going to call the election, and they were right.

But what infuriated broadcasters was the deception involved. They had been told Bennett would speak for five minutes, but he talked for 20, eating into their prime suppertime newscasts with a lengthy political diatribe. Only the last minutes were devoted to the pro forma election announcement.

If this is the sort of game the premier plays now, without any statutory authority over the airwaves, provincial broadcasters must have asked themselves what political mischief could a provincial politician wreak with the big stick of a B.C. communications authority to back him up?

A very distant second

When a compromise was worked out between B.C. and Ottawa which allowed logging to continue at Riley Creek in the Queen Charlotte Islands with reassurances that the salmon spawning stream would be carefully guarded, fishermen were skeptical about the degree of protection afforded the creek's salmon spawning beds which are as valuable in their way as the trees.

They suggested Ottawa had caved in because of political pressure.

Of course, the deal was clothed in reassuring language. Ottawa would continue to "monitor" the situation, although what's left to check after all the trees are cut down and the creek fills up with silt and debris, only a bureaucrat 3,000 miles away in Ottawa would know. And we're told that B.C. is "concerned" about the salmon habitat.

But look for the bottom line, as this provincial government is fond of saying. The suspicions of fishermen that logging takes precedence in the province, and there is little concern about any other form of economic activity which might clash with cutting the trees down, gather some justification from a few figures in the 1970-80 B.C. budget released last week.

Both B.C. and Ottawa contribute to the the long term Salmonid Enhancement Program, which is designed to clear spawning streams clogged by logging activity years ago and bring back the fish. Locally, Craigflower and Colquitz creeks are being cleaned up as part of the project. It is a highly worthwhile endeavor that will return big payoffs in the near future.

But how seriously does B.C. take part? In the fiscal year just ended, B.C.'s contribution was $2,064,800. For 1979-80, the provincial government has budgeted just $2 million. With inflation at about nine or 10 per cent, it represents a cut in actual dollars of some 15 per cent. B.C. may rationalize that the federal-provincial agreement requires it to pay only five per cent of what Ottawa budgets for the program — as Ottawa's share decreases, so does the province's. But there is nothing in the agreement preventing B.C. from increasing its contribution.

At a time when reports on the province's forest reserves have revised the amount of timber drastically downward, when money invested in fisheries comes back twenty-fold with bigger runs of salmon in only a few years, compared to the three or four decades it takes to show a return on investment in reforestation, cutting back on such a scheme is false economy.

Forests and fish are both important to the economy of B.C., but judging by the money the province is willing to spend — and its attitude in the recent Riley Creek controversy — the fishery comes a very distant second.

Clark comes home again

HIGH RIVER, Alta. — This is the home of the Little Britches Rodeo. It is also, as everyone knows, the home of Joe Clark. It is, lastly, the home of a certain idea about Canada.

The idea is Clark's. It is of a Canada made up of distinct communities, small ones like High River and large ones like Quebec, held together by the membrane of a single state. Within this state of Canada, each community, once reassured that its distinctiveness is understood and respected by the others, will reach out to all the other communities to understand and respect them.

It's a nice idea. It's Clark's best idea. The puzzle of Clark's campaign is that he has expressed it only once. That was in High River, his emotions stirred by being back in the community that defined him. The rest of the time he says as little as he can.

Vote against Trudeau

The puzzle actually isn't that hard to unravel. Clark says as little as he can because Conservative strategists are convinced (and Gallup polls confirm their judgment) that most Canadians have already made up their minds to vote against what Clark calls "four more years like the last 11 years."

Dislike of Pierre Trudeau, and the much more politically damaging distrust of him, now are probably too deeply embedded in the majority's consciousness for Trudeau to undo, no matter what he says or does. Clark though, could persuade Canadians to change back to Trudeau — if he commits a Big Blunder, if he gives Canadians a reason not to vote for him.

So Clark is playing no fault politics. He keeps his profile low. In the evenings he talks to party workers. In the mornings, he tours a mine, a tar sands plant, a shipyard, so voters can see him in the television newscasts looking active and concerned.

To give offence to as few as possible and to encourage expectations in as many as possible, Clark crafts his speeches out of carefully composed cliches, comforting generalities. They are about Canada as a land of "unfulfilled potential," about the role of a leader "to bring together people and ideas and make them work together," about himself, "more interested in building Canada than in fighting the provinces of Canada. I want to recreate among Canadians a sense of partnership."

Except in High River. There, at a mid-day meeting in the Senator Riley high school last week, Clark for once talked about the particular, the personal and the real.

He was met by a band playing We're Home Again and by smiling faces that he didn't have to reach into a politician's memory to attach names to.

Yet at the start of his speech, Clark was nervous. It is never easy to come home again. In the audience of townspeople and students were old classmates, former teachers and his parents, Charles and Grace Clark.

Then Clark put aside his nervousness and his script. He talked of High River's past. He said he was "proud of the High River way" as yet so, too, are Newfoundlanders proud of their way and Quebecers and British Columbians. "This is the marvel of Canada, that we each can be Canadians in our own way."

Just to be different is not enough, Clark said. "Be proud of where you come from, but do not limit yourselves to where you come from."

Lack of a knowledge of French, which he had failed to master in high school, once had limited him, he said. Abruptly, Clark switched to French, the first time he has done so outside of Quebec in this campaign.

Many cheers

For perhaps five minutes, Clark spoke in a language scarcely anyone in his audience could have understood. When he finished, they cheered.

Then Clark explained to the students that they, unlike him at their age, should learn French "so you will be able to understand Quebec and be able to explain Alberta to Quebecers." They cheered and cheered again.

To Albertans, in a way only he could have done because he is one of them, Clark had sent a message from Quebec. Back to Quebecers, in the news stories, went the message of an Albertan speaking their language to his own people. Two communities reaching out to understand each other — Clark's idea made real.

Hard to justify

Regarding the provincial government's restriction on hospital finances to a five per cent increase:

How can one reconcile this restriction knowing that inflation is about nine per cent with the government's statement that there is an estimated budget surplus of about $150 million?

This restriction on hospital spending is bound to reduce still further the efficiency of hospitals. If this is necessary then it must mean that the estimated budget surplus is fictitious, created by manipulating figures for the purpose of distributing goodies at election time.

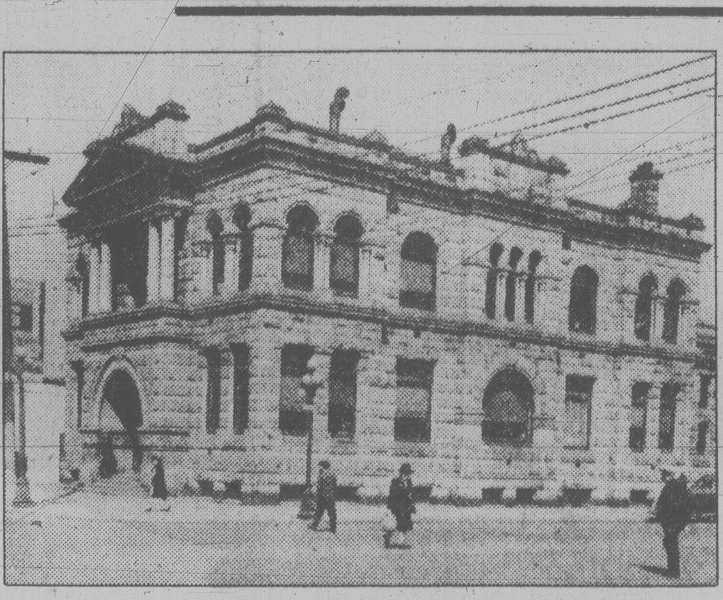
Actually the B.C. government, like all governments, is strapped for funds and must hold down spending increases in order to hold down further inflation, but this should not be done in a way damaging to the hospitals. — H. S. Thuillier, 2424 Beach Drive.

In harmony

The harp seal hunters of sparsely populated Newfoundland have been living in harmony with nature. After 300 years of hunting there are many more seals than people. By comparison, most of the criticism of the seal hunt comes from cities where human overpopulation and consequent habitat destruction have reduced the number of wild animals to a handful imprisoned in zoos.

The anti-sealing article from the London Observer (Times, March 31) is an example. I like London but the world cannot afford many places like that with a vast urban sprawl over agricultural land and a huge consumption of non-renewable resources; animals raised to feed cities have little freedom and some are raised in huge food factories with no space to move.

The urban critics come to the seal hunt in a most inefficient form of transport — helicopters consuming large amounts of fuel and exhausting pollutants. By contrast, the traditional seal hunters walk. The article by Richard Adams points out that in the past 300 years humans have rendered 300 species extinct. The harp seal is not one of them: the seal hunters have preserved the balance of nature. It is the millions of urban dwellers who are destroying nature and depleting the earth. — E. Harvey Richardson, 1871 Elmhurst Place.



Carnegie library deserves to be kept for some public purpose.

Carnegie library

The disposal of the Carnegie library building is proceeding with unseemly haste. Surely more consideration, involving the public, should be given before the city puts it up on the auction block and loses it irrevocably to private interests. Architecturally, it is a public treasure, both for its interior and exterior ornamentation. It is a philanthropic gift to the citizens of Victoria, just as, ultimately, the McPherson theatre is. To turn it into a restaurant or offices is to betray the intention of the gift.

To treat the library as a liability to be liquidated as soon as possible, rather than a civic asset whose recycled use could benefit the community, puts the lie to the image of the city administration as enlightened custodians of our heritage. So does the fact that no city-owned building carries a plaque indicating heritage designation. The library of all structures should most certainly carry this. Not only should the exterior be so designated but also the interior should also be protected from the "floating ceiling" type of renovation that mars most historic interiors.

Ald. Robin Blencoe's suggestions that the library be used as either the site of a civic museum and archives or an inter cultural community centre are excellent adaptive uses for the structure, in that the character of the building would be little altered and it would remain in public use. A similar solution has been found for the Carnegie library in Vancouver. Compared with Craigdarroch Castle as a more suitable site for a civic museum and archives, the library wins hands down both for its prime locaion and the fact that its original design was a people place.

Craigdarroch is more suited to restoration of its original use, that of a very grand domestic interior. To try to establish a public museum with a wide range of artifacts in an ornate collection of rooms designed for entirely different purposes can only result in an awkward clash between artifacts and setting. It may be politically and financially advantageous to pursue this course but the conclusion may be that we lose the Carnegie library building and gain a badly compromised civic museum. — Thomas R. Palfrey, 941 Meares Street.

Write the premier

I am surprised Arthur Mayse's disparaging remarks on April 2 (For Our Dinner, 'Taties and Herring) concerning the provincial fisheries escaped your blue pencil.

He, for one, most certainly should know about the provincial and federal joint project salmonid enhancement program, habitat protection and improvement!

As an avid fisherman and wildlife enthusiast he must realize there are many hard-working individuals all over the province guarding our provincial resources.

Arthur Mayse should write to the minister involved, his elected representative, or the premier if he has constructive criticism. — H. R. Butler, 10244 Fifth Street, Sidney.

Operation Eyesight

Mr. Art Jenkyns, president of Operation Eyesight Universal, was recently awarded the Order of Canada, the highest Canadian decoration. It is indeed the great recognition for the services rendered to the blind destitutes by OEU.

OEU (P.O. Box 123, Calgary, Alta. T2P 2H6) is a very effective Canadian organization dedicated to restoration of sight to curable blind destitutes, prevention of blindness and training of eye specialists and paramedics in the developing world. Last year alone, more than 200,000 people with eye ailments felt the healing hands of 31 OEU teams in 11 different countries and approximately 40,000 blind eyes were opened.

Art Jenkyns is indeed a man of vision and great compassion. In 1963 he heard Dr. Ben Gullison, a Canadian medical missionary, who along with his wife Evelyn, had established an eye hospital on the east coast of India in 1933, speak in his church about the plight of the blind destitutes who have to live their life in total darkness for lack of a few dollars. Mr. Jenkyns was so moved that he and some of his business colleagues started OEU.

In 1963, OEU had a budget of just over $1,000. This year OEU's budget will be over $1 million. But it is just scratching the surface of the problem.

The miracle of sight costs so little. With a ridiculously low donation of $25 ($10 for the surgery of each eye, $5 for cataract glasses, food and hospitalization for 10 days), you can give the priceless gift of sight to some helpless and hopeless blind destitute. (Here the same operation would cost over $1,000.) — Hansi Bish, 20-72 Dallas Road.

Metric mileage

I write to comment on your item of a few weeks ago on the need for a word in English to replace mileage. If the metric conversion commissioner was seious in suggesting "metrage", I must say I am apprehensive for the future of English in Canada if that authoritiative gentleman has any control.

Apparently the metric people are locked into a very mechanical operation lacking any real sense of aesthetics or sense of the damage to tradition. Our language has verbal form — "inching one's way along" (centimentering his way?) "give him an inch and he'll take a yard," etc. The language is going to be the loser from some of the metrical changes.

A few years ago when I was in Ottawa, I listened to a radio program which addressed itself to the problem. The contributors could not find one. "Metrage" does not indicate distance. (By the way I get great mileage out of my rubber-soled shoes and even some old jokes.) We meter gasoline, gas, water and many other things. Petit Larousse gives the term "kilometrage" as "action de kilometrer, mesure en kilometres." It looks as though we have no choice but to follow French usage. This may be the solution to the terminology of metric units to be adopted.

It's unfortunate that they could not find two standards for the country. They are ready to press bilingualism as a very desirable thing, expanding the mind and cultural awareness. Why limit ourselves to the field of mathematics? Why not a measuring system for things related to exports to participate in international competition and demoestic measurements for internal use where traditions are deeply entrenched? By the way, I have never heard of metric measurements for tennis courts which are part of an international sport. — John S. Scott, 576 Leaside Avenue.

Many frustrations

I am replying to a letter from Ruth Jardine, which appeared in this column March 24 referring to an interview with Mrs. Glenda Osborne in Max Low's column March 17, regarding the Victorian Celebrations Society.

Obviously, Ms. Jardine misread or misunderstood Mrs. Osborne's excellent comments, which stressed that without volunteers, there is no festival. The parade itself was not mentioned.

The resignations Ms. Jardine mentioned were a prime example of the frustrations to which Mrs. Osborne referred — the president was constantly battling an executive which refused to accept new and exciting ideas.

I am indeed gratified that Ms. Jardine mentioned that Beirnes and Houghton were elected — as elected officers, one would think that they would be concerned about an unhappy membership and would solve the problem rather than resign. I also point out that Mrs. Osborne did not indicate that all was "rosy" — she did, in fact, state that a great deal of dissension was evident during the past few years.

Nevertheless, the 1978 president did receive letters of commendation from community leaders — these communications are a matter of record and are on file. There were a great many problems during the past few years. I note she did not mention that she was chairman of button sales last year and her committee was no more successful than many of the others.

It is interesting to note, that at the time of writing this letter the Victorian Celebrations Society has raised enough money to pay off one debt, make a payment on another, and is well on the way to retiring yet a third. The person in charge of fund raising is none other than Past-President, H. Ossie Osborne. Keep up the good work. — Olive Brawnell, Sidney.

The Quebec paradox: provincialism, nationalism mixed

QUEBEC — Quebecers are paradoxical. They are ambivalent about Confederation. In many ways they are both the severest critics and the warmest defenders of the federal government. In Quebec they put in power a separatist provincial government and they seem ready to re-elect federally Pierre Trudeau, who is campaigning on being tough with the provinces. A recent cartoon by Girerd in La Presse was captioned, "Trudeau on the campaign trail." It showed Trudeau, helmeted, his head poking out of the hatch of a tank, its smoking gun barrel swinging about in all directions.

Wilfrid Laurier once told Henri Bourassa, "Quebec has no opinions; it has only sentiments." When you take a second look at the opinion poll taken recently for the CBC and broadcast on Quarterly Report, you suspect that Laurier wouldn't change his judgment if he were running in this election instead of Trudeau.

Quebecers, the poll showed, are much more provincialist than other Canadians. When Quebecers were asked which of the two levels of government they considered as "their government," more Quebecers referred to the provincial government than to the government of Canada. In every other province, more people considered the federal government as their government.

The difference is real, though it should not be exaggerated. Among French-speaking Quebecers 30 per cent considered the Canadian government as their government (compared to 62 per cent in the other nine provinces), and another 19 per cent considered both governments equally as their government. So that's 49 per cent of francophones who consider Ottawa as chiefly or equally their government.

But francophone Quebecers are more provincialist. Forty-eight per cent said they thought of Quebec as "their government," compared to only 28 per cent in the other nine provinces who thought first of their provincial government.

Another provincialist attitude was revealed by a question which asked people whether their provincial government put the interests of their province ahead of the interests of Canada as a whole. A follow-up question asked, if so, was this good or bad? Sixty per cent of francophone Quebecers said yes, the provincial government puts the interests of Quebec ahead of the interests of Canada as a whole, and it's a good thing. In the other nine provinces 41 per cent gave this provincialist answer.

WILLIAM JOHNSON
The Globe and Mail

The Quebecers were also provincialist in wanting constitutional revision to bring more powers to the provincial government. Of the francophones, 56 per cent want more powers for the provincial government, while in the other nine provinces only 27 per cent took this stand. Even in Alberta, the most provincialist of the provinces next to Quebec, only 35 per cent called for a constitutional revision which increased the powers of the provinces.

But while provincialist, the Quebecers showed far more satisfaction with the federal government than did the people from other provinces. For instance, one question asked which government, provincial or federal, "best looks after your interests." For 30 per cent of francophone Quebecers, it's the federal government, while 39 per cent thought it was the provincial government. But in the other nine provinces, only 25 per cent think the federal government serves them best, and 47 per cent think it's the provincial government.

So Quebecers are far more even-handed in assessing which level of government serves them best. In the other provinces, there is a clear balance of confidence in favor of the provincial government.

The same pattern is found in the answers to questions asking people if they are satisfied with the federal government, and then, with the provincial government. Among francophone Quebecers, 55 per cent said they were very or rather satisfied with the federal government. So Quebecers are clearly much more satisfied with the federal government than other Canadians area.

The same difference did not show up, though, in the answer to the question about satisfaction with the provincial government. Fifty-four per cent of francophone Quebecers said they were satisfied with the provincial government, which is pretty much the same as the 57 per cent in the nine other provinces who said they were satisfied with their provincial government.

LAURIER
. . . only sentiments

Does the pattern of answers mean that Quebecers are generally unhappy with Ottawa, but they have confidence in the current Liberal regime headed by a francophone Quebecer? That makes sense, but it doesn't square with another set of answers. The people were asked whether, in the past, "the federal system has made it possible to realize its aspirations." Fifty per cent of francophone Quebecers think that the federal system does not now make it possible for Quebec to realize its aspirations. So does that mean that the present is worse than the past? Judging by the answers, Quebecers seem to think so. Make sense of that, if you can.

Sudbury: ripping the guts out of a community

By ELAINE CAREY

SUDBURY — The giant stack at Inco Ltd.'s smelter stopped belching out fumes almost seven months ago. Now it looms, empty, over this northern community, a grim reminder that without that smoke there is little life here.

Last Sept. 15, 11,700 miners and smelter workers, members of Local 6500 of the United Steelworkers of America, thumbed their noses at the town's main employer and walked out on strike.

For a while the miners, who have been through this many times before, kept the town going anyway. They got out their savings and their credit cards and borrowed from relatives to make sure the Christmas of '78 was as good as any.

But Christmas passed and the strike settled into Sudbury in earnest. By mid-January it had become the longest mine shutdown in the city's history.

The credit card limits have been reached; savings accounts are empty and relatives have run out of money to lend. All that remains is the miners' grim determination not to give in to the company. As the strike drags on, their demands and the bitterness towards the company grow.

'Mother Inco'

Last week, as the city's church and civic leaders held a meeting to pray for an end to the strike, the city's mayor spoke out against the company for the first time.

"Unless Mother Inco soon comes to her senses," said Mayor Jim Gordon, "Sudbury will be a battered child, a battered community with limbs bent and scarred for life."

He said welfare rolls have increased 22 per cent; many families are facing financial ruin and small businesses are on the verge of going bankrupt.

"What are they living on? I don't know," said union vice-president Ron MacDonald. "But their opinion is, the longer we're on strike the more the company will have to pay for it. There's a terrible amount of animosity now."

The miners have taken out loans, refinanced their mortgages and simply stopped paying the rent and heat and hydro bills, agreeing to double up payments when the strike ends.

A quiet desperation has settled over the town's business community, which has always depended heavily on the $25-million-a-week Inco payroll.

No one is buying shoes or jewelry, clothes or cars anymore. The merchants who can afford to are giving credit or not calling in their debts.

Only the banks and finance companies are profiting and everyone agrees the hardest time is yet to come — when the miners have to start paying off all those debts.

In the good times, most of the miners lived from one pay-cheque to the next, paying out a third of it to their creditors for the car, the furniture and the annual vacation.

Dan MacDonald, manager of Liberty's Discount Clothes on downtown Durham St. says now they're just not buying anything.

"Since Christmas it's gone down and it's going to continue to go down until they go back to work. We're a discount store and you'd think at a time like this we would be the last to be affected. There are tables here where you can get a sweater for 50 cents but it doesn't matter; they don't have it."

He's cut back staff, cut down the hours of those still working, and asked them to take their holidays now. He said: "It's unbelievable the number of people looking for work, especially the strikers' wives."

"The way they're talking now," said Bill Blais, a salesman at Roy's Furniture, "they've waited this long, they might as well hang on. Even if they get a good offer, they'll never recover what they've lost."

Mike Mizuik has lived in Sudbury all of his 53 years and runs a small downtown jewelry store that is "barely surviving.

Teach lesson?

"The people of this community don't deserve what Inco has pulled off on them," he said angrily.

The civic prayer meeting reflected the growing bitterness. It was held to ask God "to provide the grace necessary to convince the board of Inco that the gates of heaven are open to those who respect the rights and dignity of their fellow man."

Mayor Gordon said: "The strike is driving an economic stake through the very heart of this community and for what, I ask. A stockpile? A few bucks here and there? An attempt to teach workers in this community a lesson?" he told the gathering, which included Inco's senior local management.

Gordon said the strike could have been prevented last September if the company had made a decent offer to the union, but "Inco wasn't really interested in having that happen. They were interested in their stockpile of nickel — not the stockpile of human resources. Profits is the name of the game. People is just a byword."

When the strike began, many of the local business and civic leaders and even Stewart Cooke, director of the Ontario division of the steelworkers' union, argued that it was a foolish move at a time when Inco had a stockpile of 300 million pounds of unsold nickel.

The stockpile had already caused the layoff of 2,200 miners last spring and a complete shutdown of the mines for seven weeks last summer. The company offered a small wage increase and a cost of living adjustment but argued the nickel market was floundering and it could not afford a better agreement until the worldwide situation improved.

In its annual report at the end of February, the company announced that it still has a stockpile of 230 million pounds from a year ago.

Inco's profits last year fell to $57.3 million or 77 cents a share, compared to $92.3 million or $1.24 a share in 1977.

Before the talks broke off in February, Inco offered to raise the miners' base rate of $6 an hour by 55 cents over a 26-month contract plus a 49-cent-an-hour cost-of-living increase now and a further 30 cents in March, 1980.

The union is demanding a $1.05-cent-an-hour increase by March, 1980, a full cost-of-living allowance and improved pensions for the large number of workers approaching retirement age.

The union leaders refused to take the company's final offer to the miners, arguing that it wasn't good enough. An angry local radio announcer, convinced the workers were prepared to settle, asked them to phone in their opinions last week. The calls ran eight to one against holding a vote on the company's last offer.

As the strike has dragged on, the local community has angrily come to realize it's as much at the mercy of the multi-national corporation as are the workers, said Mel Soucie, northern district economist for the federal government.

"It's been driven home to them how much the community really is in the grip of Inco and they don't like it," Soucie said.

Inco's work force has shrunk from 18,000 to 11,000 in the past eight years and pessimism about the future of the community has spread to the young people still there.

"They look around at what's happening and those who ordinarily would have stayed have decided there's no future here for them," Soucie said. "If we lose a lot of our young people, it will have a long-term effect on the vitality of his community."

Bigger profit

Added Mayor Gordon: "It's a crying shame to think we have to lose our young people because they (the company) are more concerned about running up a little bigger profit than sitting down and negotiating a decent contract the men can live with.

"Whether the city survives this is entirely dependent on Inco," he said in an interview. "If they continue on in the manner in which they have been going, it's going to rip the guts out of this community."

Many of the community's leaders saw the handwriting on the wall when Inco announced its layoffs last spring and got together to form the 2001 committee, aimed at bringing new industry to the town so that as the mining industry shrinks, the town doesn't go with it.

"We know we're dependent on Inco; we've known that for a long time," said lawyer Richard Pharand, who heads a local citizens' committee in support of the strike. "Everybody's been riding on the Inco workers' back and they're starting to realize we can't do it any more."

But for the moment, the work of the 2001 committee has come to a standstill as the community struggles to survive.

"'The Sudbury problem is a Canadian problem,'" warned Mayor Gordon. "We're not just some little unknown town stuck in the bush; we're a city of close to 100,000.

"The decisions on what really happens to a place like Sudbury are made in New York by these multinational corporations. They decide when they're going to turn the community up and when they're going to turn it down — all based on their balance sheet.

"It's time Ontarians and Canadians took stock of this and said to their government, 'Look, we want you to make sure Canadian interests are protected!'

"I can't believe the board of directors of Inco really thinks they won't have to account for this — either in this life or the next," he said angrily.

Cheers for Whang's Rancine

By CLIVE JAMES

(James is the television critic of the London Observer and recently spent some time in the U.S.)

Watching television in America is a salutary reminder of what we are not missing. In the evening there are sometimes a few passable shows, but too much of what happens at night is like what happens during the day, and almost everything that happens during the day is like the end of the world. If only the quiz shows were the worst programs on offer, American daytime television would be merely disgusting. There are, however, the evangelists, any of whom is enough to make you fall to your knees praying to see a quiz show instead.

In Chicago you get evangelists beamed at you from all directions. Jimmy Swaggart comes from across the Canadian border. "Two prostitoots off the street and they knew! They knew when they got saved! You gonna know when you get saved you gonna know when you get saved gonna know you gonna know you gonna KNOW!"

But Jimmy is only warming up. Not only has he said all that without taking a breath, he has said all that without ceasing to smile. The time has come to turn serious. He closes his eyes. "Oh God oh God oh God oh God oh God," he intones. For a moment the viewer is worried about Jimmy's state of health. Is he having a heart attack? Has a hernia given way? Is he suffering from the delayed consequences of having zipped himself up at the wrong angle? "Oh God oh God oh God oh God I pray that those who watch us over television, help them to know that JESUS is the only answer."

Jimmy, like all the other television evangelists, looks like the host of a quiz show. The quiz show hosts all look like one another. Each looks as if a team of cosmetic dentists has capped not just his teeth but his whole head. On top of the resulting edifice flourishes a wad of hair transplanted from the rear end of a living buffalo. A quiz show host is as ageless as a Chinese politician. From the beginning of the show to the end, every day forever, he says not a single spontaneous word. Even more disturbingly, the contestants don't either.

Intelligent Americans will tell you that the television quiz show is an art form. As one who likes pop culture, I am usually susceptible to such arguments, but there is a line to be drawn. It can be drawn at the point where a formula is too dead for variations on it to be interesting. Similarly there is a limit to the sense in which it is true to say that people should be given what they want. The limit can be set at the point where the spectacle on offer ceases to be human. There is something inhuman about training quiz show contestants to jump up and down with excitement, faint with surprise and yell lines of special material even more fatuous than the stuff the host is reading off his cue cards.

Shows like "Card Sharks" and "The Price is Right" can be regarded as typical. There are plenty more where they came from. After an introductory fanfare plugging Puppy Chow, Purina Cat Chow or Minute Maid ("Mom, look at all those beautiful ornges!"), the host sways into position, buffeted by a gale of applause. They are applauding him for merely being alive — as well they might, considering what his head has been through on the operating table. The host introduces the first contestant, Rancine Zilchberger from Whang, Colorado. Rancine is blown sideways by a hurricane of applause. They are applauding her for being a resident of Whang.

When Rancine straightens up, she reveals the fact that she is a medical student. This time the applause assumes the proportions of a tornado, distorting her features with its pressure. Rancine is no oil-painting at the best of times, but there is no law which says that human beings should look beautiful. What they should look is human.

Rancine, however, has been encouraged to behave like a cheerleader. Having chosen another card, or guessed another price, she hammers her desk top with her fists, chews her nails, rolls her eyes, and jumps up and down. When, amid an apocalypse of applause, it turns out that she has won, she screams and clutches her throat, strangling herself with ecstasy. Take a look at those hands. One day they could be operating on you.

CATTLE

CALGARY (CP) — Receipts to 11 a.m. at the Calgary public stockyards of 725 head saw a heavy supply of good condition slaughter steers trade actively to a broad local and export demand.

Slaughter heifers and cows met a moderate demand. A1-2 slaughter steers sold steady. Slaughter heifers lost $1 with an absence of good condition top-quality heifers. All grades of slaughter cows barely steady with good condition D1 cows scarce. There were no bologna bulls on offer.

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market fell sharply in active mid-afternoon trading today.

Trading in Brascan Ltd. A resumed shortly before 11 a.m. Edper Equities Ltd. said Tuesday it has withdrawn an offer for 11.7 million shares of Brascan, in part because of Brascan's bid for all outstanding shares of F. W. Woolworth Co. Brascan A rose 1 to $23⅝ by 2 p.m.

The Ontario Securities Commission said it has ordered a 15-day trading ban in securities of All-Can Holdings Ltd., following the arrest of two of the company's officers last week on charges of attempting to affect the public price of All-Can B shares.

The securities commission has obtained an order in the Supreme Court of Canada appointing a receiver and manager of the company. Trading has been halted since last week in All-Can B shares, which last traded at $8⅝.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices lost ground today, registering some apparent disappointment over International Business Machines' quarterly earnings report.

IBM stock was down 3¾ at $316¼, after trading as low as $314.

F. W. Woolworth, meanwhile, traded around $31⅜, up ⅜ from Tuesday, in the over-the-counter market and on regional exchanges. By mid-afternoon the stock had not reopened since the announcement Monday by Brascan Ltd., a Canadian company, of plans to offer $35 a share for it.

Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Prices climbed fractionally in light-to-moderate trading on the Montreal Stock Exchange today. Bank Canadian National gained ⅛ at $15¾, CP Ltd. ⅛ at $29¾, Consumers Gas ¼ at $21¼, Hawker Siddeley A ⅝ at $11¼, and Hudson's Bay Co. 2 at $34. Brascan A dipped ⅝ at $22, IU International ⅝ at $14¾, and MacMillan Bloedel ⅛ at $22½. Among speculative issues, Basic Resources lost ⅛ at $8 on a volume of 2,000 shares traded.

London

LONDON (Reuter) — The London stock market advanced moderately near the close of light trading today. The Financial Times index rose 1.6 to 537.3. Industrials gained slightly while oils were mixed and mines drifted easier. Canadian shares firmed.

Pipe Threatened By Tanker Ban?

SEATTLE (AP) — The proposed U.S. Coast Guard ban of supertankers in Puget Sound might kill the proposed Northern Tier Co. oil pipeline from Port Angeles to Minnesota, a company official said Tuesday.

"There is no doubt that the Coast Guard ban as presently proposed would bar anything (supertankers) from coming into Port Angeles," said Bill Sage, northwest coordinator for Northern Tier.

"I doubt if our project would be economically viable under those conditions."

The Coast Guard proposed rules Monday that would permanently ban tankers of more than 125,000 deadweight tons from entering Puget Sound or sailing east of Angeles Point, which is a few kilometres west of Port Angeles.

Northern Tier's proposal for moving Alaska crude oil to Clearbrook, Minn., involves a tanker port at Port Angeles and a pipeline underneath Puget Sound and across the Northern United States.

But the head of the Coast Guard department in Washington, D.C., which drew up the proposed rules, said Tuesday the Angeles Point limit "could be changed," depending on public comment.

Capt. Frederick Schubert, who heads the Coast Guard's office of marine environment systems, said Angeles Point was picked as the western barrier to supertankers "primarily in the interest of good vessel traffic management" in the busy Port Angeles shipping area.

He said the point is the current western edge of a vessel traffic service area, where there are some routing and reporting requirements as well as limited surveillance of shipping.

"There is no intent to influence any pipeline proposal, either existing or future," Schubert said. "The final rules could be changed significantly as a result of public comment and input."

The large tankers are currently prohibited from entering the sound under a temporary order from U.S. Transportation Secretary Brock Adams, pending the new Coast Guard rules.

Northern Tier wants to route its pipeline under Puget Sound to pass near oil refineries on the east side of the sound.

"We recognize that there is an environmental problem with oil tankers in Puget Sound," Sage said. "That's why routing (under Puget Sound) would make hookup feasible" with the refineries.

He said it would not be economically feasible to build a pipeline and then supply it with tankers of less than 125,000 tons.

Sage said the Northern Tier pipeline would eliminate virtually all oil tanker shipments in Puget Sound if it hooked up with refineries.

Without it, "there's nothing to prevent (oil companies) from increasing the number of tankers to those refineries," Sage said. "The Coast Guard does not regulate frequency of tanker shipments."

Sage said that would increase the likelihood of an oil spill, which Schubert said was a "probably reasonably accurate" argument.

11 More Officials Executed

TEHRAN (AP) — Revolutionary firing squads executed 11 more senior officials of the shah's regime today, including former cabinet ministers, secret police chiefs, the speaker of parliament for 15 years and the commander of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi's Imperial Guard.

Six generals were among those who died.

The executions were carried out before dawn, Tehran Radio said, and brought to 101 the number of men put to death since the forces of Ayatollah Khomeini ousted the shah's government two months ago.

Those shot today included two former chiefs of SAVAK, the shah's secret police — Gens. Hassan Pakravan and Nasser Moqaddam; Gen. Ali Neshat, the Imperial Guard commander; Gen. Mohammad Taghi Majidi, who headed a military court that tried rebels against the shah; Gen. Ali Hojat Kashani, who was accused of large-scale embezzlement; and Brig. Hossein Ali Bayat, a member of parliament, senior police official and governor of the city of Zanjan.

Pakravan also had been information minister and ambassador to Pakistan and France.

Other former cabinet ministers executed were Mansur Rohani, former electricity, water and agriculture minister, and Abbas Ali Khalatbari, foreign minister from 1971 to 1978 and secretary-general of the Central Treaty Organization from 1962 to 1968.

The others put to death were Abdollah Riazi, speaker of parliament's lower house from 1960 to 1975; Alameh Vahidi, a senator who supported the shah for many years, and Gholam-Reza Nikpay, former mayor of Tehran.

Tehran Radio said they were convicted of treason, corruption, collaboration with the shah's regime and "acts against the people." It said the property of some of them is being redistributed among the people of Iran.

In an interview with the official Pars news agency, Deputy Foreign Minister Ahmad Salamatian accused foreign news organizations of putting unwarranted emphasis on the trials and executions.

"More than 100,000 people were executed during the French Revolution without any trial," he said. "Speedy trial is natural in revolutionary conditions."

He added that during the 13 years that Premier Amir Abbas Hoveida headed the shah's government, it admitted to 550 executions.

Hoveida was executed Saturday.

Meanwhile, about 4,000 jobless Iranians demonstrated Tuesday in downtown Tehran, snarling traffic and chanting, "Promises do not make bread!" Other jobless workers staged a sit-in at a laborers' club in the central Iranian city of Isfahan.

Deputy Premier Abbas Amir Entezam announced emergency loans are planned for the unemployed, now estimated between one million and three million of the 10-million work force.

Double-Header Jewel Heists

PARIS (AP) — Armed robbers struck two Paris jewelry stores Tuesday and made off with loot estimated at nearly $2 million. Police said it appeared the jobs were pulled off by two different groups with three men each.

Witnesses said three men armed with pistols burst into a store in the city's fashionable 16th district and made the eight employees and customers lie on the floor.

Employees then were forced to open the safe, which the robbers cleaned out. The thieves pistol-whipped two employees before fleeing in a car with about $1.62 million worth of jewelry.

The second robbery, in the nearby 15th district, also was carried out by three pistol-wielding men. The robbers scooped up an estimated $232,000 worth of jewelry and fled by motorcycle, firing a shot as they left.

Cosmonaut Link-Up Set

MOSCOW (Reuter) — A Bulgarian and a Soviet cosmonaut, aboard the latest Soyuz-33 spacecraft, prepared today to link up with two other Soviet cosmonauts who have been orbiting the earth for the last five weeks.

If their flight follows the pattern of previous link-ups they can expect to dock their craft to the Salyut-6 orbiting space station and float through the transfer hatch later today.

Maj. Ivanov, who joined the Soviet space team last year, is the first Bulgarian to go into space under the Soviet Interkosmos program.

Officers from Poland, Czechoslovakia and East Germany have previously teamed up with Soviet crews.

"I dedicate this flight to my motherland", Maj. Ivanov told viewers of Soviet and Bulgarian television shortly before take-off.

Rukavishnikov, a civilian engineer, has made two previous space flights in 1971 and 1974 and is one of the oldest Soviet cosmonauts.

Once on board Salyut-6, the two men will carry out scientific and technical experiments with their colleagues Vladimir Lyakhov and Valery Ryumin.

Lyakhov and engineer Ryumin have been making extensive repairs and replacing used equipment on Salyut-6 which has been in space for 18 months and severed as home for both Soviet and East European space crews in the past.

A supply craft, Progress 5, which the two cosmonauts finished unloading last week, brought fuel and equipment for the joint test program about to begin, a Soviet space official said.

Envoys Recalled

CAPE TOWN (AP) — Two top South African diplomats in the United States have been recalled by Foreign Minister Pik Botha for urgent consultations, the Cape Town newspaper Die Burger said today.

Donald Sole, ambassador in Washington, and Riaan Eksteen, South Africa's representative at the UN, are expected home early next week, it said. The subject of the consultations was not disclosed.

Notice to Shareholders

Hudson's Bay Company

The following are extracts from the Bay's Directors' Circular dated April 8, 1979

This Directors' circular is issued in connection with the offer dated April 4, 1979 (The . . Weston offer . .) by George Weston Limited (. . Weston's . .) as amended on April 6, 1979, to holders of ordinary shares of Hudson's Bay Company to acquire 13,855,000 ordinary shares (60% control) of the Bay at a price of $40.00 per share. The full terms are set out in the Weston offer.

Reference is also made to the Thomson offer dated March 15, 1979 and to the Directors' circular with respect to that offer dated March 23, 1979, in which the Directors recommended that shareholders prepared to recognize the prospects of the company over the next few years should not accept the offer. The Thomson offer was amended on March 31, 1979, and on April 8, and the offer is now for 75% of the Bay shares at a price of $37.00 payable in cash. It is no longer conditional upon the deposit of any minimum numbers of shares and the expiry date has been extended to April 17, 1979.

Recommendation

The Directors have concluded on the basis of advice from the company's financial advisors that the value of the Thomson and Weston offers per Hudson's Bay Company share are now approximately equal. However, the Weston offer is conditional upon Weston's obtaining 45% of the outstanding shares, and is subject to other uncertainties and disadvantages which are discussed under the heading . . . Reasons for Recommendations . . below.

The Board of the Bay has been advised by its financial advisors that, in view of the substantial premium of both offers over the pre-offer market price $23.00, many shareholders will wish to accept one of the offers. The advisors have also stated that some major shareholders will very likely accept the unconditional Thomson offer which now closes on April 17, and thus will be assured that at least 75% of their shares will be purchased under the offer.

In all these circumstances, the Directors recommend, in the absence of any further amendments to either the Thomson offer or the Weston offer, that shareholders should accept the Thomson offer rather than the Weston offer.

The Directors suggest shareholders deliver their shares to their financial agents with instructions not to deposit until close to the deadline for acceptance of the Thomson offer so that they will retain their options in case there are further developments.

Reasons For Recommendation

In the Directors circular dated March 23, 1979, relating to the Thomson offer, the Directors valued the ordinary shares of the Bay on a net asset basis at not less than $47.00 before tax and $41.00 after tax. On an earnings basis, using projected 1983 earnings of $6.23 per share and applying appropriate earnings multiples and discount factors, the Board arrived at a present value of from $37.00 to $40.00 per share. While the Weston offer is within the range of values suggested by the Board and has potential tax advantages to certain shareholders, it has the following disadvantages and uncertainties.

A) It is conditional upon acceptance by holders of 45% of the shares. Accordingly there is a possibility that sufficient shares may be tendered under the Thomson offer to make it impossible for Weston to secure 45% of the shares. Thus shareholders may not be able to sell their shares under the Weston offer.

B) Weston's current financial structure, with its present leverage, could have an adverse effect on the future ability of the Bay to finance its long term development programme and to achieve the earnings projections set out in the Directors' circular dated March 23, 1979.

C) The company understands that the Director of Investigation and Research under the Combines Investigation Act is considering whether the proposed acquisitions by Weston and by Thomson constitute an illegal merger. Such a merger includes an acquisition of a business of "A competitor, supplier, customer or any other person" whereby competition:

- A) In a trade or industry
- B) Among the sources of supply of a trade or industry
- C) Among the outlets for sales of a trade or industry or otherwise, "is, or is likely to be, lessened to the detriment or against the interest of the public."

A court, if convinced that either acquisition was likely to lessen competition to the detriment of the public, could order the merger to be dissolved or could order that it not be consummated.

Counsel for the company have advised that, although it is not possible to express a firm opinion without a thorough investigation of the businesses likely to be affected by the merger, there is less risk of action being taken to dissolve the Thomson merger than the Weston merger.

The Thomson offer states that if the bid is successful, no changes will be made in the business or operations of Hudson's Bay Company and accordingly the business thrust of the company will be maintained.

The Thomson offer is for cash and for 75% of the shares while the Weston offer is for 60% of the shares and requires that the aggregate consideration be paid part in cash and part in preferred shares.

This notice is published for shareholders' convenience only. Please refer to the full text of the Directors' circular which will be mailed shortly to shareholders.

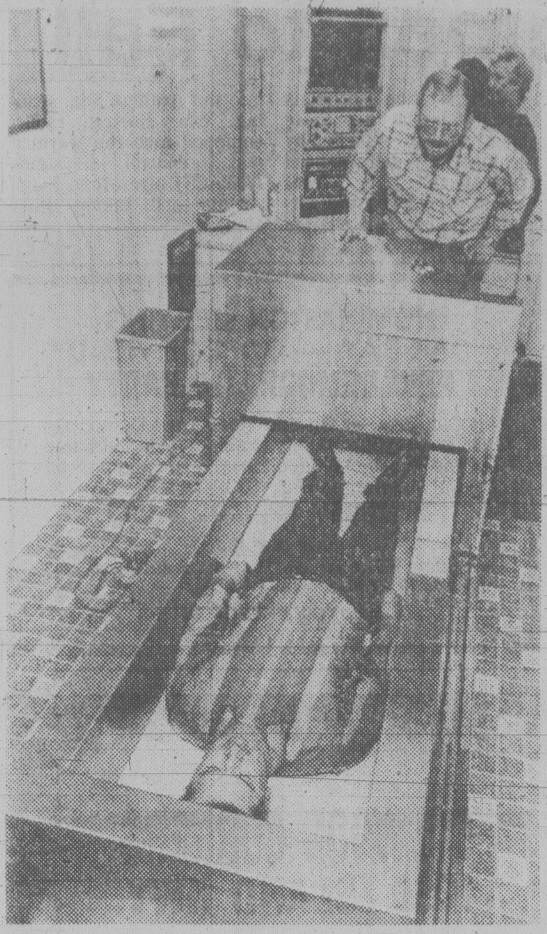
How Much Radiation Is Too Much?



Pennsylvania farmer has radiation scan

Washington Post

The people who live around the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant have become the newest human guinea pigs in a health experiment that has been going on for more than 30 years.

The question to be settled is what are the long-term health risks to individuals exposed to low levels of radiation?

It is a question that today is being sharply and bitterly debated by scientists and doctors inside and outside government.

The debate has the same overtones that accompanied the cigarettes and cancer controversy — but with a difference.

The Pennsylvanians did not volunteer to be dosed with low-level radiation.

Nor did other human subjects in this experiment — the Japanese survivors of Hiroshima and Nagasaki; the Marshall Islanders exposed to radioactive fallout in 1954; the GIs and Utah residents exposed by the 1950s Nevada nuclear tests.

Little more than a month ago, Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. declared that no one knows for sure how to estimate the risks of cancer from low-level radiation. But he termed finding some answer high on the public health agenda.

Until the past few years, however, the government and the public seemed willing to accept standards in existence for almost 20 years. These said low doses of radiation — below 5,000 millirems a year — would not cause significant health problems even over the 10-20-30-year periods during which some cancers develop.

In recent years, however, a series of highly publicized findings, based on studies of limited groups exposed at different times to low radiation levels, have sharply challenged the existing theories.

A Utah State scientist studied Utah children exposed to fallout that drifted 100 miles from the same 1950s Nevada weapons tests. He found they had twice the as many leukemia cases as children who had lived in the same areas before and after the tests.

A statistical survey of workers at the government's nuclear facility at Hanford, Wash., turned up a slight increase of some types of cancers, although the workers had absorbed less than 5,000 millirems.

Opponents of nuclear power seized upon these studies and added them to their anti-nuke arsenal. On the other side, supporters of nuclear power produced doctors and scientists to attack the findings, or the manner in which the studies had been done and even the qualifications of the researchers.

Scientists agree that women and children are more prone to radiation damage than men. And preganant women are perhaps the most vulnerable since absorbed radiation could do severe harm to a fetus.

These considerations led to the evacuation of pregnant women and children from the areas within five miles of the Three Mile Island plant.

Since man became aware of radiation and its hazard to human health, the amount of radiation exposure considered "safe" has been going steadily down.

At the turn of the 20th century, x-rays were an enormously popular new medical discovery. Despite evidence at the time that heavy x-ray doses were harmful, it was not until 1921 that any limits were set.

By 1925, the international standard was put at 1,000 millirems a week; whereas, by 1957, it had been dropped to 5,000 milliremsa year.

Califano said last week that the evacuated women and children from around Three Mile Island, plus workers at the stricken facility, would be prime subjects for a proposed long-term health study.

Jet Lot Closer, Report Claims

DETROIT (AP) — A TWA jetliner that survived a harrowing barrel roll and dive was only 2,000 metres from earth when it levelled off — not 4,000 metres as previously reported, says a Detroit newspaper.

A source close to the investigation told the Detroit News on Tuesday that the plane's sealed flight recorder shows the Boeing 727 dove to 2,000 metres from 13,000 metres in a little more than two minutes. That contradicts information given by crew members.

Crew members told investigators for the Federal Aviation Administration and the National Transportation Safety Board that they pulled out of the uncontrolled dive at 4,000 metres.

The flight recorder was reported to have indicated the plane dropped more than one kilometre closer to earth before it levelled off.

The recorder date shows an average descent rate of 5,330 metres a minute, including the last several thousand metres in which the plane was slowing down and levelling off.

The pilot, Harvey Gibson of Las Vegas, made an emergency landing at Detroit's Metropolitan Airport on Wednesday night. Three of the 87 persons aboard were slightly injured.

Tragedy Mars Holiday Tour

ZAMORA, Spain (AP) — A bus filled with students on a Holy Week excursion missed a curve and plunged into the Orbigo River in northwestern Spain Tuesday, killing more than 40 children and three teachers.

Paramilitary civil guards and local residents formed rescue parties to free the bodies from the wreckage, police said.

The bus carried 56 children and three teachers from a private school near the Atlantic port of Vigo, police said.

They said six persons were taken to local hospitals, but added that there were conflicting reports about the number of survivors.

The students, all between the ages of 12 and 14, were returning home from a visit to Toledo and Madrid.

Steel Offers Liberal Backing

LONDON (UPI) — Britain's small third-ranking Liberal Party said today it is willing to make a deal with either Labor or the Conservatives if neither big party wins an overall parliamentary majority in the May 3 general election.

"We are prepared to co-operate with whichever party will go with us some way along the same road," Liberal leader David Steel said in an election manifesto.

John Pardoe, the Liberals' deputy leader and chief economic spokesman, told a news conference presenting the manifesto: "It does not matter the least little bit to us whether it is the Conservatives or Labor. We are completely openhanded on this."

He said the only criterion is which of the two big parties agrees to work with the Liberals in exchange for their support.

Pardoe indicated the kind of deal the Liberals offered was similar to the so called "Lib-Lab Pact" under which the Liberals kept Prime Minister James Callaghan's minority Labor government in office for 18 months in 1977-78 in exchange for consultation on major economic policies.

Pardoe claimed the period of the "Lib-Lab Pact" was "by any standards the most impressive and best 18 months of government the country had enjoyed for the past 20 years."

The Liberal manifesto called for:

— Electoral reform, scrapping the present winner-takes-all majority voting system used both by Britain and the United States and replacing it with a proportional representation system.

— Constitutional reform, introducing a federal system under which Scotland and Wales would have greater self government.

— Slashing income tax, making the so called "standard rate" 20 per cent instead of the present 33 per cent and rising to a maximum 50 per cent in place of the present 98 per cent.

"A stronger Liberal presence, backed by a powerful Liberal vote throughout the country," the manifesto said, "will ensure that the door is opened to fundamental change, not slammed again by the negative reactions of the old two-party game which has failed the nation."

When the last Parliament was dissolved the Liberals held 14 seats out of 635.

How Your Garden Grows

Proper lawn care

From early spring until fall, your lawn needs continuous care if it is to remain green and healthy—

Spring renovation. Most lawns become compacted over the winter months, and the grass suffers from a lack of aeration. This can be remedied by punching holes in the turf with an aerator or digging fork. Next, rake to remove aerator plugs and thatch (accumulated clippings, etc.). Then, mow the lawn to improve its ragged appearance and give grass an even start.

Spring is also the time for Green Valley Dolomite Lime. Apply at the rate of 4 lbs. (1.75 kg) per 100 square feet ($9m^2$) and water in. After two weeks, apply Green Valley Super Lawn Builder 12-4-8 at 1 lb. (.45 kg) per 100 square feet ($9m^2$) and water thoroughly. In another three weeks, your lawn will be thick and healthy.

If your lawn is uneven, you may apply a top dressing of screened compost or a 50-50 mix of peat and sand. However, this is not recommended unless the lawn needs levelling. Where top dressing is over one inch deep, scratch in a little Penn-High Lawn Seed.

During the growing season. Proper watering is essential for a healthy lawn. A good soaking once a week during dry weather is recommended, ideally on a cloudy or cool day to avoid excessive evaporation. Do not sprinkle lightly, as this encourages shallow rooting. Fertilizing is also important. Three applications of Green Valley Super Lawn Builder 12-4-8—in April, July and September—will maintain healthy, thick turf. If your lawn is growing vigorously, be sure to mow often—twice a week if necessary. If using a reel type mower, remove cuttings. With a rotary mower, cuttings may be left on lawn.

Fall care. To bring your lawn through the winter in the best possible condition, apply Green Valley Winter & Spring Lawn Food 3-15-6 at the rate of 2 lbs. (.9 kg) per 100 square feet ($9m^2$). October is the month for this final step.

Guerrilla War In Nicaragua Stepped-Up

SAN ISIDRO, Nicaragua (AP) — Fighting was reported in six cities in northern Nicaragua as the Sandinista guerrillas stepped up their war against President Anastasio Somoza.

Among the cities were Esteli, El Sauce, Leon and Condega, but the National Guard — Somoza's 10,000-man army and police force — said the situation was under control Tuesday and that 64 guerrillas were killed in three days of fighting along with seven soldiers and nine bystanders.

The guard also denied the guerrillas controlled Esteli, as witnesses claimed, but sent reinforcements and Jeeps packed with machineguns and other weapons to the embattled city.

U.S. Predicts N. Yemen to Fall

By JIM HOAGLAND

WASHINGTON (WP) — U.S. intelligence organizations have concluded that President Ali Abdullah Saleh's government in North Yemen, which is receiving emergency shipments from a $500 million U.S. arms package, is likely to collapse within the next six months, according to U.S. sources.

The intelligence estimates circulating in the administration concede that U.S. analysts are highly uncertain who will succeed the erratic, unpopular Saleh and take control of the F-5E jet fighters, M-60 tanks and other weapons now being turned over to the North Yemen army, according to these sources.

The new estimates of Saleh's shaky grip on the country he has ruled since June and the uncertainty about his successor have touched off discussions at the State Department, National Security Council and Pentagon about slowing the emergency shipments authorized by President Jimmy Carter on March 9 to stem an invasion from Marxist-ruled South Yemen.

Pentagon officials said there has been no change in the schedule of deliveries authorized under Carter's decision to use a presidential waiver to bypass congressional review of a large arms export. The two-week-old border war between the two Yemens began to die down about the time of Carter's decision and has been quiet since.

The Carter administration has been careful not to identify its military and diplomatic support for North Yemen, specifically with Saleh.

The administration's actions on the Yemeni crisis have indicated a large American interest in stability in that remote, mountainous Arabian Peninsula country, and Saleh's overthrow could have implications far beyond its border.

The administration's actions in the Yemeni conflict were intended more to reassure conservative Arab governments, especially Saudi Arabia, that Washington would act to protect them and to signal the Soviet Union that "the limits of destabilization" had been reached in the Persian Gulf, according to a senior U.S. official.

Administration officials strongly assert that those objectives were achieved by rushing the Saudi-financed arms package to North Yemen, deploying the aircraft carrier Constellation into the Arabian Sea, sending two Boeing radar-equipped airborne warning and control systems (AWACS) aircraft to Saudi Arabia and taking other steps.

It's Every Bag Opened In British Customs' Stall

By BRUCE LEVETT

LONDON (CP) — Coming to Britain for Easter? You might end up spending more time in the airport than you did on the plane.

The situation arises through a change of tactics on the part of the disgruntled Society of Civil and Public Servants.

Twice the society has pulled out — among other workers — the customs and immigration staffs at airports and seaports around Britain.

Each time, incoming passengers swept through the turnstiles and Britain became a smugglers' haven for a day.

All this served to publicize the union's claim for approximately 25 per cent in pay increases but it did not bring about a settlement.

This time, the union is getting tough.

Starting Thursday, only about 10 per cent of the normal customs and immigration staff will be on duty at Heathrow and Gatwick airports in London and at Birmingham and Manchester airports and ports at Dover, Harwich, Folkestone and Southampton.

And this 10 per cent vows to insist that every single passenger opens every single bag, even if the passenger is in the "nothing to declare" line.

Passports will be scrutinized as never before.

"We are stepping up the industrial action of our customs and immigration members this week and it will cause chaos and great disruption in Easter traffic," says a union statement.

"I would not travel at Easter unless it was absolutely necessary," a spokesman added.

Planes and ships are not expected to leave on time as queues build up. As the backlog increases, scheduled flights and sailings may have to be cancelled.

Britons are becoming used to union disruption at holiday time, to the point where — rather than spend two or three days sleeping in airport terminals — wise travellers book their jaunts for off-peak periods.

The result has been that canny Britons plan to spend the usual get-away-from-it-all periods quietly at home watching television.

But even that scheme is coming unstuck.

Chances are that the BBC, which operates two of Britain's only three television channels, will be blacked out by industrial action during the Easter break.

Engineers have decided to go ahead with an overtime ban starting Thursday oer a two-year-long dispute concerning grading.

This might mean a complete vlackout not unlike the one that disrupted BBC programs five days before Christmas.

Hopes had been high that this would have been a trouble-free holiday period when the Civil and Public Services Association promised they would not call our air traffic control assistants this time.

All eight civil service unions said they would wait for an improved offer from the government after Easter and would not step up selective strike action.

The civil servants' society, however, said in a statement: "We are still looking for a pay increase of 25 per cent . . . and we want it now."

Adriatic Coast Rocked

BELGRADE (UPI) — An earthquake rocked the southern Adriatic coast in Yugoslavia's Montenegro state near the Albanian border today but caused no damage or injuries, seismologists said.

The quake had the same epicentre as Monday's strong quake measuring 5 on the Richter scale that shook the Montenegro area and caused slight damage to old buildings in the towns of Ulcinj and Bar.

Today's quake hit the area at 3:26 a.m. (6:26 p.m. Tuesday PST) and measured 3.3 on the open-ended Richter scale. The epicentre was in the Adriatic Sea some 217 miles south of Belgrade, seismologists in the Yugoslav capital said. Its intensity in the epicentre was 4.5 degrees on the 12-degree Mercalli scale.

Times Running Out of Time

LONDON (Reuter) — Hopes faded today that The Times, Britain's oldest and mostly widely-known daily newspaper, would resume publication next Tuesday as planned.

Negotiations were still going on between management and unions leaders to end the dispute which has closed The Times, The Sunday Times and their sister publications since Nov. 30.

But a management official said: "We are not very optimistic. There is still a lot of negotiation and a lot of difficult ground ahead of us. And there is not much time."

He confirmed that the management's commitment to re-employ all staff dismissed because of the closure would no longer stand if publication did not resume by the April 17 deadline.

Times newspapers suspended publication after failing to obtain agreement from the unions on computerized typesetting technology, outlawing of wildcat strikes which cost more than 13 million lost copies last year, and an end to overstaffing.

Negotiations to end the dispute began early last month after mediation by the Labor government's employment minister, Albert Booth.

Environmentalists Backed Over Charlottes' Claim

A B.C. government agency has confirmed the claims of environmentalists that logging practices on the Queen Charlotte Islands cause loss of forest soils and widespread destruction to fish spawning creeks and rivers.

The report of the Environment and Land Use Committee secretariat on South Moresby Island, also contradicts the claims of the forests ministry and logging companies that clear cutting of forests lands on the islands is not detrimental to the forest environment.

It describes the Queen Charlottes as having some of the most inherently unstable terrain in the province.

"Any discussion of land use or environmental management must refer to terrain conditions," it stated.

"Here extremes of rainfall intensity, high winds, soil characteristics, steep slopes and seismic activity combine to make large tracts of land naturally unstable."

The report said the practice of clear cutting in some areas had caused land and debris slides resulting in the physical destruction of fish spawning creeks and rivers.

The avalanches are not only destroying fish spawning grounds but reducing forest productivity, it added.

The report also states that federal fisheries believes that if sensitive sites continue to be logged in the Charlottes, maintenance of fish habitat and production in commercial quantities will not be possible.

Bastion Closes its Season With a Delightful Comedy

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

To leave them laughing is one of the prime precepts of the entertainment world and Bastion Theatre has followed it in closing the curtain on its 1978-79 season at the McPherson Playhouse.

Artichoke by Canadian playwright Joanna Glass guarantees its audiences a happy memory to walk away with. While not exactly a sit-com — its implications are somewhat wider than those to be found in the average sit-com — the comedy does not have its source in the wit of the characters but totally from the situation they themselves have created.

The marriage of Walter and Margaret has been stalemated for some 16 years, since Walter erred with a female water diviner and the result arrived nine months later on the back porch in a laundry basket. Walter has slept in the smokehouse from that day forward and Lily-Agnes — "the source of their problems" as she describes herself — is a happy if slightly "tetched" teenager.

In the midst is Gramps, a sturdy three-score years and ten, Margaret's father, who manages to remain neutrally devoted to his Saskatchewan farm chores.

Onto this scene comes the invader, Gibson McFarland, who is also the play's deus ex machina. He has childhood family connections with Gramps and Margaret.

He is a university professor and has invited himself for a summer six-week stay to recover from a psychiatric problem.

His coming rouses jealousy in Walter and amorousness in Margaret and promotes a crisis that causes Walter to leave home and take cover with a couple of old bachelor neighbors. The play's theme suggests that isolation is not a matter of prairie space so much as it is a condition we create for ourselves.

Pride and inarticulateness have set a great distance between the protagonists in Artichoke. It can only be resolved when both are brought to their knees in recognition of themselves and their needs.

Director Ron Ulrich has given the production atmosphere, pace and vitality. He has kept it uncluttered so that the underlying theme emerges clearly but with an appropriate lightness of touch that avoids sentimentality.

The cast performs well as an ensemble. John Krich as Walter is effectively obtuse and handles his comedy as well as the moments that touch poignancy, with a fine sense of balance. Lally Cadeau gives a strong well defined performance as a fresh youthful looking Margaret who appears to have suffered not a whit from her years of denial.

Ron Hartmann's Gibson is an outstanding portrayal; warm, sensitive, completely believable in its disorientation and reaching out toward the security of relationships in a vanished childhood.

Robin Marshall and Gregory Reid as the bachelors create two enjoyable comic characters, who also provide a kind of chorus, presenting the exposition and commenting on the action from their own elevated kitchen.

The opening exposition is, in fact too long and one wonders from time to time why the commentary was considered necessary by playwright Glass.

Highway Workers Back In Langford

Sixteen workers of the provincial highways' sign shop at Jacklin Road in Langford were back on the job today after walking out Tuesday to protest the three-day suspension of a clerical worker.

A meeting was held by representatives of Local 1001 of the B.C. Government Employees Union and management Tuesday but in spite of the fact the worker's suspension was reduced to one day, the workers decided they would also stay out for the day.

Union spokesman Don Burns said the worker received a "dressing down" on Monday in front of others. He became emotionally upset as a result and when he said he was going home, the man was told to take an extra three days.

His co-workers decided to stay out the same amount of time as he was off the job.

Community Plan Drafted

Saanich council will be asked Tuesday to adopt in principle its draft community plan and to forward it to the Capital Region Board for comment.

Regional approval is expected to take two months. Council will then call a public hearing before adopting the document as its official community plan.

The likely date for a hearing is June 27, or failing that July 5, council's planning committee was told Tuesday night as it crossed the last Ts and dotted the last Is in what has been a slow, painstaking job of editing.

In the closing minutes of months of often-heated debate, Mayor Mel Couvelier surprised his council colleagues by recommending that, after all, the plan be designated an official community plan.

It will have all the trappings of official status, including its adoption by bylaw following a properly constituted public hearing.

Couvelier, who earlier had vehemently opposed such a course, said a review undertaken by staff following the last council argument on the issue had convinced him it was the right way to go.

The plan predicts that the urban area of Saanich has little more than a decade of growth left before all the land within the urban containment boundary (UCB) is fully developed.

It estimates the total number of "potential developable lots" within the UCB at about 6,300, of which about 75 per cent (4,700 lots) would be available for detached housing and the remainder for some form of higher density housing.

"On the basis of current trends and anticipated population projections, the inventory of potential lots within the urban containment boundary will be exhausted by 1990," the planners state.

Said Ald. Howard Sturrock: "That's when we lock the door and throw away the key."

Assistant municipal planner Alan Hopper pointed out that if Saanich is to accommodate its projected population growth to 108,000 by the year 1996, there must be considerable rezoning to higher density housing, particularly in such areas as the Gorge and Cloverdale.

After some aldermen expressed concern about a map showing possible density increases to accomplish such population growth, the committee agreed to amend the map's accompanying text to stress that the figures are theoretical rather than firmly planned.

According to the plan several neighborhoods, mostly in southern Saanich, would see sharp density leaps. The Quadra-Cloverdale-Tolmie area, for example, is shown increasing from the present 30 units per hectare to 69.

The increase projected for Cordova Bay is also more than double, from seven units per hectare now to 15.

Hopper said there may be neighborhood opposition to such forecasts when the area plans which complement the community plan are discussed later. In that case, he added, the main plan's density forecasts could be scaled down.

Pay-TV to Cover Canadian Content

OTTAWA (CP) — A federal telecommunications study says long-distance phone rates are too high, cable company profits should be regulated and the CBC should be given more money to preserve social and cultural sovereignty.

The study group under chairman J. V. Clyne also recommends that pay television be introduced as soon as the technology is available and that part of profits of pay-TV — with subscribers paying for each program watched — should go to Canadian programming.

The study committee was appointed last November to determine how to reorganize telecommunications to best protect Canadian sovereignty.

The result is a sweeping study with 26 recommendations affecting telephones, cable, television and radio, communications satellites, computers and new technologies such as fibre optics.

The report warns the perilous position of Canadian sovereignty resulting from changes in telecommunications.

More and more, Canada is being saturated by foreign programming, private interests are rapidly taking control of massive amounts of data stored in foreign computers and the communications manufacturing industry faces tough international competition which may overwhelm it without government help.

In its key recommendation affecting the CBC, the report suggests a study of the crown-owned corporation's role and the money it needs to do its job.

"The broadcasting services provided by the CBC are the main national instruments for the preservation of Canadian social and cultural sovereignty," it says.

"The CBC should be afforded whatever means may be required to reinforce its function in that regard."

The CBC, which received about $540 million from the federal government last year, had its financing frozen this year under federal budget-cutting exercises.

The study says the high cost of long-distance telephone calls "is a barrier to national communication and understanding."

It says the provincial governments and the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission (CRTC) — responsible for the industry — should review the rates and see that they reflect national as well as regional intrests.

It says pay-TV should be introduced in a pay-per-program rather than a pay-per-channel basis and should become available as soon as the technology allows.

Pay-per-program television would help avoid the "continuing subjugation of television audiences to lowest-common-denominator programming."

Canadian content regulations should be developed for pay-TV and a levy on profits should be used for Canadian programming. There should also be a share of cable profits devoted to such programming.

Among other key recommendations in the report:

—The CRTC should emphasize quality in measuring Canadian content of private broadcasters and should develop a points system combining qualitative, quantitative and prime-time aspects.

—The government should immediately stop Canadian data being stored in U.S. computers "to ensure that we do not lose control of information vital to the maintenance of Canadian sovereignty."

— The federal government, in co-operation with the provinces and private industry, should use tax and other incentives to promote private, Canadian-owned data banks.

—The government should help exploit Canada's technological leadership in such areas as communications satellites, fibre optics and video information-retrieval systems, known as Telidon.

—Cable companies should be forced to black out programs lifted from U.S. channels if the same program is running on a Canadian station.

Clyne and committee member Robert Fulford dissented in this view.

—The number of U.S. stations carried by a cable company should be limited and precedence given to Canadian stations.

Canadian Dollar Drifting

MONTREAL (CP) — The Canadian dollar edged past Monday's record close of 87.09-cents U.S. during active morning trading on New York currency markets Tuesday, but slipped back to 87.03-cents U.S. when the markets closed.

The Canadian dollar fluctuated between a high of 87.30-cents U.S. Tuesday and a low of 86.99 during Tuesday's trading.

Analysts say Tuesday's surge coul be attributed to the "relatively positive" unemployment figures released by Statistics Canada.

"The seasonally-adjusted rates were basically the same," said one bank trader. "That's good for Canada . . it hasn't gone down."

But the same analyst added that he wouldn't be surprised if Tuesday's peak of 87.30-cents U.S. was the highest the dollar will reach this year.

Purse Theft Netted $4

City police are looking for three youths who attacked a woman on a downtown street early Tuesday night and stole her purse containing $4.

A police spokesman said Rosemary Warner, of 2031 Courses, was walking near Fort and Broad at 6:45 p.m. when she was jumped from behind and knocked to the ground. One of the youths wrenched her purse from her hand.

A U.S. Answer to Laker

WASHINGTON (UPI) — After 12 years of proposals, court battles and a Congressional hearing, airline maverick Edward Daly today inaugurates cut-rate no-frill coast-to-coast flights.

Daly's World Airways, primarily a charter carrier, will fly from Baltimore to Washington, and Newark, N.J., to Los Angeles and Oakland, Calif. for $99.99 plus tax one way — a total of $107 per ticket.

The service promises to do for transcontinental travel what Freddie Laker's skytrain proposal did for travel to Europe.

The round trip fare of $214 on World Airways is not much lower than many special fares offered on the regularly scheduled airlines such as American Airlines. But those fares require advance purchase, certain length of stay or other stipulations.

Daly, who personally flew a plane to Vietnam during the final days before the communist takeover to bring out refugees, first asked the Civil Aeronautics Board on April 26, 1967 for permission to offer transcontinental service for $79.

Although the CAB for years ignored Daly's persistent efforts, chairman Marvin Cohen is scheduled to make an address at the inaugural flight.

Another airline, Texas International, beat World to the punch by offering a $99 transcontinental fare on April 1.

Jim O'Donnell, Texas International vice president for marketing, said the first two weeks of his airline's $99 transcontinental fare has "on average come delightfully close to the break-even point."

Howie Romps In

Victoria mayor Mike Young received a letter from Port Hardy mayor Brian Welchman today but it didn't arrive through the mail.

The letter was delivered by Port Hardy miner Al Howie on completion of a 360- mile run from the up-Island town which began just before dawn on Saturday and was completed about 8 p.m. on Tuesday.

Howie, 33, made the run to raise funds for the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund.

In completimg the run under four days Howie breaks the record he set last October when he raised just over $300 for the United Way after running from Victoria to Port Hardy in just under six days.

Just a few midweek thoughts on fish and chips and hockey. No, they are not related. Just drifted into my mind.

Must say, I'm rather partial to fish and chips and I find it a little ironic to read in almost every news realease from the Greater Victoria Visitor Information Centre reference to our city as "this little bit of Olde England tucked away on the southern tip of Vancouver Island" while over in that bastion of Englishness, Oak Bay, officials feel a fish and chip shop will lower the tone of things behind the Tweed Curtain.

Good gracious! Can't have that, chaps, can we?

That was the attitude, in fact, when Oak Bay council indicated at a recent meeting it doesn't want a fish and chip shop on sedate old Oak Bay Ave. Most adamant about it was Ald. Peter Bunn who literally turned up his nose and said fish and chips wasn't what council was told when the property was rezoned.

Bevin Doke, the man who proposed the take-out or eat-in fish and chip restaurant, isn't saying much right now as council referred the matter to one of its committees for further ponderance.

But come now, Peter old boy, don't you and the other Tweedies realize that nothing could be more English than being able to stroll through the Village delicately munching chips wrapped in newspaper?

Apparently not. For Ald. Bunn said he could look at a reputable, genuine restaurant with an open mind and Mayor Brian Smith hinted that he wouldn't mind a nice little French restaurant.

Heavens above, and may all your mothers choke on muffins! Those may be very patriotic sentiments that would undoubtedly delight Mr. Trudeau, Mayor Smith, but what on earth is happening to this little bit of Olde England tucked away beyond the Tweed Curtain?

And the hockey?

Well yes. The other day, a child of mine brought home a sheet of paper from Elsie Miles Elementary School in Shawnigan Lake.

The students in Grade 5 had been doing cinquains which, the paper explained, are short poems that have five lines. The first line is for one word representing the title. Then come two words describing the title, three words expressing action about the title, words giving the writer's feelings about it and finally, another word for the title.

So far, so good.

Cliff Thompson, too, drew a delightful word picture of the game of soccer.

"Wet, muddy; kicking, shooting, scoring; cold, fun, sore, happy," he said.

Then along came young Kevin Weiten with his thoughts on what most regard as Canada's national game, hockey.

Two words describing the title: "Fighting, punching," Kevin wrote.

What about three words expressing action: "Tripping, elbowing, penalty box."

From that you might deduce that Kevin is a little disillusioned with the hallowed game of hockey. But wait. His words expressing his feelings about the title?

"The best sport ever!"

Old Soldier Is Still Fighting

By AB KENT
Times Staff

Dutton, a Memorial Pavilion patient who's spearheading a battle to publicize staff cutbacks and a money shortage he feels will hurt patient care, is extremely articulate.

But words begin to fail him when he tells about patients who feel they are being abandoned because of provincial restraint on hospital spending.

"If a sick person is lying in the street, are they going to leave him there?" he asked.

Royal Jubilee Hospital, along with others in the province, is limited to a five per cent increase in hospital expenditure this year — not enough to provide for increased salaries negotiated last fall.

A direct result has been a cutback in nursing staff at the Memorial Pavilion and in Dutton's intermediate care ward, Alcorn 1, where only a skeleton staff remained, nursing supervision is being further reduced.

"Will the Victoria public stand idly by and let the province of B.C. tie the hands of hospital authorities behind their backs?" Dutton asks.

He has no quarrel with the hospital administrator, Dr. A.C. Pickles — "a genuine doctor with the interests of the hospital in mind. It's no fault of the administrator, but the administrators of the hospital system.

"I'm speaking primarily for the veterans, but generally the whole hospital system is having its back broken by petty bureaucracy."

A hospital spokesman said in spite of efforts to maintain a traditional level of care in the former DVA hospital, the administration was instructed to make staff adjustments bringing nursing supervision to the level provided in non-veteran intermediate care facilities.

There will be no registered nurse on duty at night in the intermediate care section, although an RN from another area would be available if necessary.

The nursing spokesman said the reduction is difficult for patients to accept and is distressing for the staff, but she made it clear that professional care still will be assigned to Alcorn 1 and 2 during the day and licensed practitioners at night.

"The RNs here are the finest in the world, a dedicated group for the veterans from the head nurse down, and breaking their backs to help us. But they're stymied at every turn."

Patients would not be getting RN supervision between 9 p.m. and 7 a.m. at the time when they are most likely to need it, Dutton said.

He said fire drill in the ward requires a person in charge to close all doors as a fire control measure as soon as the alarm sounds.

Exactly 30 minutes after he made the statement, the hospital fire alarm went off but no one came into the ward to close doors. This was reported to a fireman who appeared in the ward some time later.

That alarm was false, but the patients had no way of knowing and most of them would have required help to get out if there had been a fire.

Dutton said the majority of 33 patients in Alcorn 1 can look after themselves with a little assistance in dressing, and most can walk or get about. But all require varying degrees of personal care.

Two are subject to heart attacks, two are on oxygen, some wander and others are permanent wheelchair cases. They are permitted to smoke in the ward.

Dutton has expressed concern on behalf of his colleagues to Pacific command, Royal Canadian Legion, which has a committee in Victoria monitoring the situation at Memorial Pavilion. But he said nothing has come of their efforts as a result of meeting with the hospital administration.

Symphony Boss Picked

The former operations manager with the Winnipeg Symphony has been appointed manager of the Victoria Symphony Society.

Robert J. McGifford takes up the post May 1.

Symphony president Dorothy Frost said the appointment is in keeping with a commitment by the symphony board to fiscal responsibility.

McGifford, a chartered accountant, was responsible for the over-all financial management of the Winnipeg Symphony.

This included budgets, fund raising, grant applications, ticket sales and the introduction of a systems approach to data processing.

Prior to his position with the Winnipeg Symphony, McGifford was treasurer of Kensington Consultants Ltd. and assistant international controller of K-Tel International Inc. He is a board member of the Association of Canadian Orchestras.

McGifford will be in Victoria early next week for talks with symphony officials.

$1,008 Robbery

Thieves broke into George's Bavarian at 1021 Pandora overnight and made off with $1,008 that had been left in two desk drawers in a front office.

The theft was discovered by a cleaner at 5:32 a.m.

A city police spokesman said the rear door had been pried open.

CARRIER PRINCESS

More Tour Buses

Conmac Stage Lines Ltd., a firm owned by Jerry Conrod and Wayne McArthur, who operate the Victoria Airport Travelodge in Sidney, has asked the provincial government for a licence to operate a charter and tour bus operation in Greater Victoria and to the Mainland.

Taking a gamble, the company has bought 11 buses, eight of them double-deckers from Derby, England, while awaiting cabinet approval for a transportation licence.

Conrod says he is hoping for a decision this week.

He and McArthur are skilled in the tour bus industry. They owned Tweed Line Tours, which pioneered the use of double-decker buses for Greater Victoria tours before it was bought out by the New Democratic Party government in 1973.

Four of the double-decker buses arrived Monday after a 6,421-mile trip across the Atlantic and a cross-Canada trip by CP Rail from Montreal to Victoria.

Another four are on order and are expected here in June.

The Daimler buses, which weigh 12 tons each, seat 65 passengers and are later models of those already in service in this area.

The buses cost about $17,000 each when landed in Victoria. McArthur is already in Japan promoting package tours for the new service.

Election Kills Budget Ceiling

The provincial government's five per cent ceiling on municipal budget increases for 1979 appears to have been wiped out by Premier Bennett's election call, Saanich aldermen were told Tuesday night.

"It rather looks like the five per cent limitation will go by default this year," Mayor Mel Couvelier commented at a finance committee meeting.

But the mayor later told reporters Saanich council still intends to do its utmost to keep its budget increase as close as possible to the five per cent figure.

He said it was never made clear whether the limitation was intended merely as a guideline or to have any legislative authority.

In any event, no legislation was placed in front of the House before dissolution. And with the May 10 election to be held just five days before the May 15 deadline for budget adoption, it would be impossible for the government elected to take any such legislative action in time.

Meanwhile, Couvelier said, Saanich is unlikely to get answers from the provincial government's inspector of municipalities on a series of requested exemptions, including the police and fire department budgets.

Earlier Tuesday, council's budget committee approved a $2,387,470 budget for the parks and recreation department, an increase of $207,580 or 9.5 per cent on 1978.

That increase is whittled to only 5.4 per cent, however, if the municipality's new recreation facilities are not included in budget calculations — one of the requested exemptions Saanich had earlier submitted to the government.

Among the major expenditure proposals deleted from the parks and recreation budget in 15 hours of pruning spread over three days were $108,000 for a boulevard tree program and $42,000 for various construction projects.

But it wasn't entirely a hacking day Tuesday. The committee increased by $15,000 (to $819,640) projected revenues from Saanich's recreation facilities.

Couvelier made it clear to recreation officials that he expects an aggressive marketing and promotion approach to encourage better use of the Saanich facilities and make them more competitive with those of other municipalities.

Victoria Makes $1½M Trim

City council has managed to pare $1,493,553 from 1979 budget requests by various departments, finance chairman Ald. Murray Glazier said today.

He said the budget now provides for $27,694,407 in expenditures which are subject to the provincial five-per-cent guideline. This compares with $26,883,933 actually spent last year.

"We are $533,723 under the allowable five per cent increase and this figure will change as a number of important policy discussions are made by council in meetings to come," he said.

The city's final budget and mill rate will be set by May 15.

So far major cuts in the budget have been in public works ($613,500), fire department ($483,538), general government ($91,268) and traffic engineering ($82,807).

"Growth in the assessment roll through new construction and increases in city revenues will absorb a fair amount of increase in expenditure without needing any property tax increase, but it is too early to make any forecast of the 1979 mill rate," Glazier said.

More Vote in City

There will be 65,107 eligible voters in Victoria riding and 68,537 in Esquimalt-Saanich riding in the May 22 federal election.

The figure for the Victoria constituency, one of only 16 ridings across Canada whose boundaries are unchanged from the last federal election, is 2,146 higher than the 1974 total of 62,961.

Esquimalt-Saanich returning officer Malcolm Anderson said today comparisons with 1974 are relatively meaningless in that constituency as a result of boundary changes.

Law Building Given Okay

University of Victoria has been given the green light to call tenders for a $6 million law building, it was announced today.

Law Dean Murray Fraser said the $6 million is the total estimated cost, including landscaping, furniture and equipment.

He said the contruction timetable has not been announced but the faculty hopes the building will be completed by September, 1980.

The law faculty was formed four years ago at UVic and is still in its temporary quarters, in the library building.

Fraser said the faculty is badly crowded in the library building but he is delighted this looks like the final year for temporary quarters.

The university has been authorized to call bids and, if they are within projected cost limits, a contract would be awarded.

Fraser said the announcement appears to represent the successful conclusion to a four-year campaign for permanent quarters.

Christie Enters Race

Victoria lawyer Doug Christie has entered the race for a provincial seat in the Esquimalt-Port Renfrew riding.

Christie, 32, will run as an independent representing the interests of the Committee for Western Independence which he founded four years ago.

The committee, with about 4,000 members, seeks B.C.'s separation from the rest of Canada.

This will be Christie's first election contest as a candidate. He has been associated with the Conservative party for nearly 20 years and is still a member of the party's executive in Esquimalt-Port Renfrew, although not currently active.

Christie will face at least four other candidates. They are Frank Mitchell of the NDP, incumbent Socred Lyle Kahl, Tory Bill Langlois and Wayne Arthur Wiliams, another independent.

Midnight Deadline for Voters

MORTON
. . . clashes with natives

The deadline to register for the provincial election remains at midnight tonight, Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis has announced.

Curtis said despite protests there is no need to extend the registration time and in any case, he would need approval from the legislature to do so.

As a result, voters have just a few hours to be certain they are on the list.

The office has a bank of 10 phones, which can be reached until midnight at 387-5909 or at any one of a series of numbers between 387-1953 and 387-1958.

Curtis said 90 per cent of B.C.'s eligible voters were already on the list before the election was called and almost all the remaining 10 per cent have subsequently been added.

Proof of registration will come in the form of a registration card, which is in the mail and should be delivered today or Thursday at the latest.

Curtis was responding to complaints from the NDP and the United Native Nations.

Yvonne Cocke, a past-president of the provincial NDP, had asked for a one-week extension in the deadline because of continuing confusion in some areas about the registration process.

Many people have not received the registration confirmation cards, she said.

The cards have been sent out as third-class mail at 15 cents instead of 17 cents, and this delayed delivery.

Victoria post office spokesman Buz Sawyer said the cards for local constituencies should all be delivered this week.

Native association vice-president Brian Maracle alleged there are thousands of Indians who had not been registered and Morton was asked for 10,000 application forms so the United Native Nations association could complete the job.

Morton refused and Maracle later called him "a redneck" and asked Premier Bill Bennett to intervene.

In a telegram to the premier, Maracle said between 20,000 and 30,000 people of Indian ancestry have not been registered and asked Bennett to put pressure on Morton to co-operate.

Morton said the accusations were "a damned lie and you can quote me."

He said Indian people had been thoroughly canvassed and it is impossible that 20,000 to 30,000 were left off the list.

Maracle said an Indian representative went to Morton's office to get the 10,000 cards for a voter-registration campaign, was turned down and given a stern lecture by Morton.

"He was told in so many ways that you don't do it this way, you do it our way — or you don't do it at all. He (Morton) is a real redneck."

Morton said the Indian representative "was arrogant as hell."

RANGERS, LEAFS, PENGUINS WIN

Canucks Shock Flyers in Opener!

By The Canadian Press

During the final days of the regular season, several National Hockey League clubs jockeyed for position — searching for the highly-coveted home-ice advantage in the playoffs.

What advantage?

Preliminary-round action opened on four fronts Tuesday night, and in only one instance did the home squad prevail.

The biggest shocker of the night came in Philadelphia where the Flyers were upset 3-2 by Vancouver Canucks.

The Canucks finished 32 points back of Philadelphia in the standings and carried the worst record of the 12 playoff clubs into post-season competition — 25-42-15.

Meanwhile, New York Rangers were busy doing their part to support the law of averages with a 7-1 drubbing of the visiting Los Angeles Kings while Atlanta Flames and Buffalo Sabres were digging themselves into a serious hole beside the Flyers.

With each series a best-of-three affair, those opening-game losses on home ice could prove critical.

Toronto Maple Leafs downed Atlanta 2-1 in a game which set six playoff penalty records, while Pittsburgh Penguins outlasted the Sabres 4-3.

The venue shifts for the second game in each series Thursday night.

The Canucks have taken a very practical approach to their series with the Flyers.

"We've been off since Friday, so we flew to Toronto to practice and to rest before coming here," said rookie coach Harry Neale. "We got the travel out of our system. Philadelphia had only one day to prepare, and you can't do that in the playoffs."

"There was no pressure on us," added rookie centre Thomas Gradin, who put the Canucks ahead 1-0 at 1:35 of the second period. "We just went out to have fun. "You have to be confident. If you're not, you're in the wrong game."

Stan Smyl, another rookie whose goal nine seconds into the third period gave Vancouver a 2-0 lead, said the Canucks knew "right from the beginning that we had to work hard."

"Everyone wanted to win so bad. We didn't have anything to lose, and now the pressure's all on them."

The Canucks, playing only their eighth playoff game in nine seasons in the NHL, also led the two-time Stanley Cup champions 3-1. Bobby Clarke's goal at 6:30 of the third, pulled the Flyers to within one goal, but the Canucks regained the two-goal margin when Don Lever scored at 10:28.

The Flyers pulled goaltender Wayne Stephenson for the game's final two minutes and Reggie Leach completed the scoring with 25 seconds remaining.

"I felt we had it won then," said Canucks goalie Gary Bromley, a veteran of four NHL and World Hockey Association seasons. It was also his first Stanley Cup appearance.

Flyers coach Pat Quinn wasn't certain of his strategy for the second game.

"I don't like to act out of emotion, and I haven't given it enough thought yet," he said. Quinn, also in his rookie season as coach, said he "didn't think overconfidence was a problem."

"But now I have reason to think we were (overconfident)."

At Atlanta, a bench-clearing brawl broke out with 51 seconds remaining in the second period. A total of 155 minutes in penalties was assessed and nine players were banished with game misconducts.

On the night, the teams combined for 219 penalty minutes, 115 to Atlanta — both records. The previous marks were 185 and 107, respectively.

The other four records were for one period. A total of 35 penalties were called in the second period, 19 to Atlanta, beating the previous marks of 24 and 17. The 181 penalty minutes in the second period was a two-team record — 132 being the previous high — with the 99 minutes to the Flames, a single team record — besting the mark of 73. Toronto also surpassed the old record with 82 minutes.

Ian Turnbull, Dave Hutchison, Dave Williams and Darryl Sittler were the Toronto players ejected, while Darcy Rota, Ken Houston, Brad Marsh, Dave Shand and Willi Plett of the Flames were thrown out.

Walt McKechnie scored both Toronto goals in a span of 2:48 during the second period as the Leafs handed the Flames the 11th loss in their 12-game playoff history. McKechnie's first came on a breakaway at 6:26 with the Leafs shorthanded and the second at 9:14 on a pass from behind the Atlanta net by Dan Maloney.

Jean Pronovost scored for Atlanta at 16:37, but the Flames were unable to get another shot past Mike Palmateer, a standout in the Toronto goal.

At Buffalo, the Penguins continued their mastery of the Sabres. Pittsburgh has won seven of its last 15 meetings with Buffalo, dating back to March, 1976. The other eight ended in ties.

Captain Orest Kindrachuk's goal at 15:48 of the final period proved to be the winner for Pittsburgh, which trailed 1-0 after the first period and 2-1 entering the final 20 minutes.

Centre Walt Tkaczuk and defenceman Mike McEwen each scored a goal and set up two others as the Rangers prevailed over the Kings. Defencemen Dave Maloney scored twice and Ron Greschner added a goal and an assist for the New Yorkers.

Los Angeles left winger Charlie Simmer tucked Marcel Dionne's rebound past Rangers' goaltender John Davidson at 9:17 of the first period to pull the Kings into a shortlived 1-1 tie.

A First and Last for Oilers

By The Canadian Press

Edmonton Oilers won their first — and last — World Hockey Association season championship Tuesday night despite losing 6-4 to Winnipeg Jets.

The Oilers earned the top spot after New England Whalers defeated second-place Quebec Nordiques 5-2 in the only other WHA game Tuesday. Quebec now has no chance to catch Edmonton.

The WHA will disappear next season when Edmonton, Winnipeg, Quebec and New England join the National Hockey League.

Winnipeg goaltender Gary Smith made several outstanding saves in the game against the Oilers and contributed three assists to tie the WHA single-game record set by Gary Kurt of Phoenix.

Morris Lukowich fired in his 64th and 65th goals of the season for Winnipeg in the second period to break open a 2-1 game. The Jets surged ahead 5-1 on a goal by Willy Lindstrom early in the third period. Rich Preston and Peter Sullivan rounded out Winnipeg's scoring.

Edmonton's 18-year-old centre, Wayne Gretzky, gave the Jets a scare in the third period when he scored three goals on rebounds at 7:21, 14:45 and 15:45. Brett Callighen scored the other Edmonton goal.

Edmonton coach Glen Sather said when it was announced to the 10,319 fans at the start of the second period that the home team had won the championship with Quebec's defeat, "it fired up Winnipeg more than us."

Sather said for the Jets, now one point ahead of the Whalers in their battle for third place, "the fight is with New England."

Winnipeg coach Tommy McVie said the Oilers "deserve to be league champions." He called Gretzky "a little magician" who almost made the Jets blow away a 5-1 lead. Smith faced 29 shots while Edmonton's Dave Dryden and Ed Mio were tested 27 times.

In Quebec City, Gordie Howe got his 18th goal of the season to break a 2-2 deadlock for the Whalers at 12:19 of the third period.

He said injury was still bothering him.

"My ankle is still a little sore. I have problems turning sometimes. I'm like poetry in slow motion."

Asked if he would be back next year, Howe said: "We'll just have to wait and see. I will probably make a decision late in the summer or when training camp opens."

Richard Now Wildest of Wild

By Canadian Press

At 6-foot-8, J. R. Richard is the tallest player in the major leagues.

He also is the "wildest," wild in the sense of wild pitches.

Richard established himself as the wildest pitcher in modern baseball history, throwing a record six wild pitches in Houston Astros 2-1 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers Tuesday night.

"Maybe some of them (the six wild pitches) should have been stopped," Richard said after his scatter-armed performance against the two-time National League West champions. "But catching me isn't easy sometimes."

Richard, who set a National League record for right-handers with 303 strikeouts last year, also is too strong to hit frequently. He struck out 13 and allowed only six hits.

The six wild pitches broke the modern mark — since 1900 — of five set by Charles Wheatley of Detroit in 1912 and equalled by Larry Cheney of Brooklyn in 1918. John Ryan of the 1876 Louisville team holds the all-time record of 10 wild pitches in one game.

In other National League games, Philadelphia Phillies beat Pittsburgh Pirates 7-3, San Francisco Giants downed San Diego Padres 4-2, Atlanta Braves topped Cincinnati Reds 6-4, St. Louis Cardinals whipped Chicago Cubs 7-0, and Montreal Expos outlasted New York Mets 3-2 in 14 innings.

In the American League, Milwaukee Brewers blanked Boston Red Sox 3-0, York Yankees edged Baltimore Orioles 7-6, Minnesota Twins trounced California Angels 8-1, Texas Rangers whipped Cleveland Indians 5-0, Toronto Blue Jays crushed Chicago White Sox 10-2 for their initial victory of the season and Seattle Mariners downed Oakland A's, 4-1.

Elder Gains Confidence

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Lee Elder drove up Magnolia Lane, wheeled his car into the player's parking lot and sauntered undisturbed into the locker-room at the Augusta National Golf Club.

A couple of people came over to congratulate him on a solid performance last week, then they drifted away, and Elder quietly went about his business.

"It's all the difference in the world," he said. "The pressure is off. I feel like I can just go play.

"The curiosity is gone. Now I'm another player. I can change my shoes and nobody bothers me. I don't have the press and radio and television and just fans following me around every step of the way."

He paused a moment and grinned.

"Why, I could go out there and make 12 on a hole and it's no big deal," he said. "Nobody would care. Before, it would have been headlines all over the world."

In 1975, Elder was the focus of international attention when he became the first black to play in the Masters golf tournament. He was hounded constantly for interviews, autograph seekers, well-wishers and the curious ones.

Predictably, he failed to make the cut for the final two rounds that year and wasn't eligible for the Masters the following season.

But he won again on the PGA tour, became a Masters participant in 1977 and, subjected to less attention and pressure, finished tied for 19th. He made the cut again at Augusta National last season and now is back for his fourth appearance.

And this time he's simply another player in the field of 72 chasing the famed green jacket that goes to the winner of the tournament.

"The only pressure I have now is the pressure I put on myself," he said after a practice round Tuesday.

That self-imposed pressure is the same that is experienced by all — the pressure to win. And Elder, perhaps for the first time, may have a legitimate shot at it. He tied for fifth last week in Greensboro and was fourth a month ago in Inverrary.

"I'm playing good enough to win, and I'm playing with confidence," the 44-year-old said. "I'm putting some — got the knuckles going in the right direction.

"I'm hitting the ball as well, or better, than anybody else in the field. I'm playing the best I ever have coming in here."

Cats Suffer Two Losses

PORTLAND — Victoria Cougars might have been willing to shrug off one loss but the second setback Tuesday night was hard to take.

Portland Winter Hawks' 2-1 victory over the Cougars in the first game of the Western Hockey League's Western Division final was one that Victoria coach Jack Shupe could have tolerated under normal circumstances.

Only the first in a best-of-seven series that continues tonight at 8 in Memorial Arena, the Cougars have time to rebound.

Recovery hopes, however, may have been dimmed by Victoria's other loss Tuesday.

Tony Feltrin, a 17-year-old rookie who has developed into one of the Cougars' most dependable defenceman, has been sidelined for the balance of the season. Feltrin, who returned to action only last week after missing six weeks of the regular season because of a broken bone in his left wrist, suffered a double fracture of his right arm.

It was a jarring setback for the Cougars because the defence, maligned because of inconsistent play, had played well in the semi-final round-robin and was "coming on." The defence was without veteran Todd Morton, recovering from a knee injury, for the preliminary series but Feltrin (on his return), Mark Robinson, rookie Len Dawes and Scott Lang had been providing good service.

Feltrin suffered his injury with about three minutes left in the second period and Cougars clinging to a 1-0 lead. He was checked by Portland winger Bart Yachimec and fell heavily into the boards. There was no penalty called on the play.

Feltrin's loss threw a black cloud on an otherwise strong performance by the Cougars and an especially brilliant one by goaltender Steve Amiss. Victoria's overaged player, the red-headed goalie was clearly the game's individual standout as he supplied the spark that almost flared into an important upset.

Amiss made 44 saves, including 18 in the final period. Rival netminder Bart Hunter also sparkled, especially in the early going to keep the Hawks in the game until their third-period assault produced the tying and winning goals.

Cougars jumped into the lead after only four minutes, 58 seconds when Randy Irving scored. With Amiss and an alert defence doing their jobs, Cougars remained on top until the 2:20 mark of the third when Ron Chorney tied the game. Max Kostovich scored the winner on a picture passing play 6½ minutes later.

Amiss had no chance on either goal.

Meanwhile, Brandon Wheat Kings erupted for six unanswered second-period goals and went on to defeat Saskatoon Blades 9-1 in the best-of-seven Eastern Division opener.

Sanderson Absolved

Ward Sanderson of Vancouver Burrards, the Western Lacrosse Association all-time penalty leader, has been cleared to play in the upcoming season.

The decision over Sanderson, who was embroiled in two violent incidents during games between Victoria and Vancouver last season, was announced Tuesday by WLA commissioner Wally Donaldson.

"Last season, Ward Sanderson was suspended for five games by my predecessor Roy Burton and the commissioner recommended that Sanderson be suspended from the WLA for one year," Donaldson explained.

"I took the suspension and recommendation to the senior directorate recently and the members held up the five-game suspension but felt the one-year ban was excessive. Sanderson sat out one game at the end of last season so he will miss the first four league games this year."

Meanwhile, Shamrocks continue to tune up for the season and have scheduled exhibition games against Esquimalt Legion of the Western Major Junior League on Apr. 21 and the Nanaimo Timbermen on Apr. 28 at the Cowichan Community Centre.

Shamrock home schedule:

Well, Somebody Is Going to Play

There will be a first division match in the Vancouver Island Soccer League tonight at Royal Athletic Park — but the teams involved still haven't been decided.

Nanaimo City tripped Nanaimo United 2-1 in the final regular-season match for both teams but United protested during the match that City was using an ineligible juvenile player.

United is battling University of Victoria Vikings and Cosmopolitan Royals for third or fourth place. Only the top four teams advance to the playoffs.

League executives were expected to rule on the protest today after receiving information from Nanaimo juvenile authorities as to whether the proper procedures had been followed in picking up a player.

If the protest is upheld, United will have third place and Vikings and Royals will meet tonight in a sudden-death match to decide fourth spot.

If the protest is disallowed, second-place Victoria West will face Royals in a playoff semi-final.

Some rambling notes along the trail:

Got the urge to do a little wandering about Vancouver Island this summer? . . . Then a new map of the Island put out by W.A. (Phil) Winter of Victoria, who spent three years compiling the data, would make a good investment to help trip planning . . . It manages to compress a monumemtal amount of useful information on ferry routes, airline routes, bus and railway routes, provincial parks and facilities, game management area boundaries, logging company campsites, wilderness campsites, marinas and facilities, golf courses and facilities and boat launching sites at various lakes into a small amount of space . . . In addition, the map has contour lines, lists distances from point to point in both kilometres and miles, contains street maps (with locations of important facilities) of the major Island centres and lists wilderness picnic sites and interesting features . . . It's worth far more than the $2.50 asking price and is now available at the Palace News and Victoria Book and Stationary stores in Victoria.

Chinook Club members of the Victoria-Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association will hold their first monthly Sunburn Derby of the year from dawn to 2 p.m. Sunday.

Just a thought . . . Any changes in the regulations governing sport salmon fishermen will have to be instituted very carefully . . . For instance, bringing in a blanket regulation raising the size limit to 18 inches would bankrupt most boathouses in Saanich Inlet, where 80 per cent of the fish caught are below that size . . . Any such rules should be on a site-specific basis . . . If the federal capitulation over the logging ban on Riley Creek in the Queen Charlottes is any indication, however, it's not likely we'll see those new regulations imposed in the near future . . . After all, there's an election in the offing.

Another snippet from the proposed budget of current provincial administration shows exactly why the forest industry has such a large voice — despite its painfully obvious faults — in this province . . . Timber sales, which brought in $79.2 million in tax revenue last year, are expected to more than double in the current fiscal year to $164 million . . . Timber royalties, too, are expected to jump from $8 million to $12 million.

In case you haven't noticed, this is National Wildlife Week in Canada . . . The theme this year is: "Endangered Habitat: Wildlife in Danger" and Kenneth Brynaert, executive-director of the Canadian Wildlife Federation, says the aim is to "focus public attention on the plight of Canadian wildlife resources and habitat" . . . The problems facing our wildlife resources are numerous and the population declines, decimations and extinctions will continue unless steps are taken immediately.

Lee Straight, outdoor editor of the Vancouver Sun for 33 years, has been hired by federal fisheries to act as a spokesman for sports fishermen . . . He will assess trends in sports fisheries and will assist in determining and recommending controls . . . In addition he will attempt to develop, test and sell ideas for projects that might help preserve or improve the quality and diversity of the sport . . . His interim telephone number in Vancouver, for anyone wishing to express an opinion, is 666-1876.

Suns, Nuggets Take Openers

By The Canadian Press

The word on the mind of coach Jack Ramsay of Portland following Tuesday night's opening game of the National Basketball Association playoff series with Phoenix Suns was "intensity."

Strong bench play and a key offensive rebound by Alvan Adams in the closing seconds gave the Suns a 107-103 over the Trail Blazers in the first game of their best-of-three, first-round Western Conference series.

A disappointed Ramsay told reporters: "We played with intensity. We played well. As long as we play with intensity, the rest of the game will come around."

In Tuesday's other Western Conference opener, Dan Issel tossed in a season-high 30 points and David Thompson added 27, sparking Denver Nuggets to a 110-105 victory over Los Angeles Lakers.

Kings to Great Falls

EDMONTON (CP) — Owners of Western Hockey League Edmonton Oil Kings have announced they have sold the club to a Portland, Ore. group and it will be moved to Great Falls, Mont. for the next season.

Bill Hunter, who shared ownership with Vic Mah, Ed and George Assaly, Ed Hughes and Wayne Tennant, said the reason for the move is the poor support the team has received here since moving from Flin Flon last August.

"When we bought this club, we said we'd give it our best for the year, but Edmonton is obviously a major league city today," said Hunter, referring to the city's professional hockey, football and soccer clubs.

The club, which finished second last in the WHL Eastern Division, averaged crowds of 500 over the last two thirds of its 72-game schedule — the worst turnout in the league. Losses were reported as $100,000.

Great Falls has a new arena seating 5,000.

DRIVE WITH CONFIDENCE ON GOODYEAR POLYSTEEL RADIALS

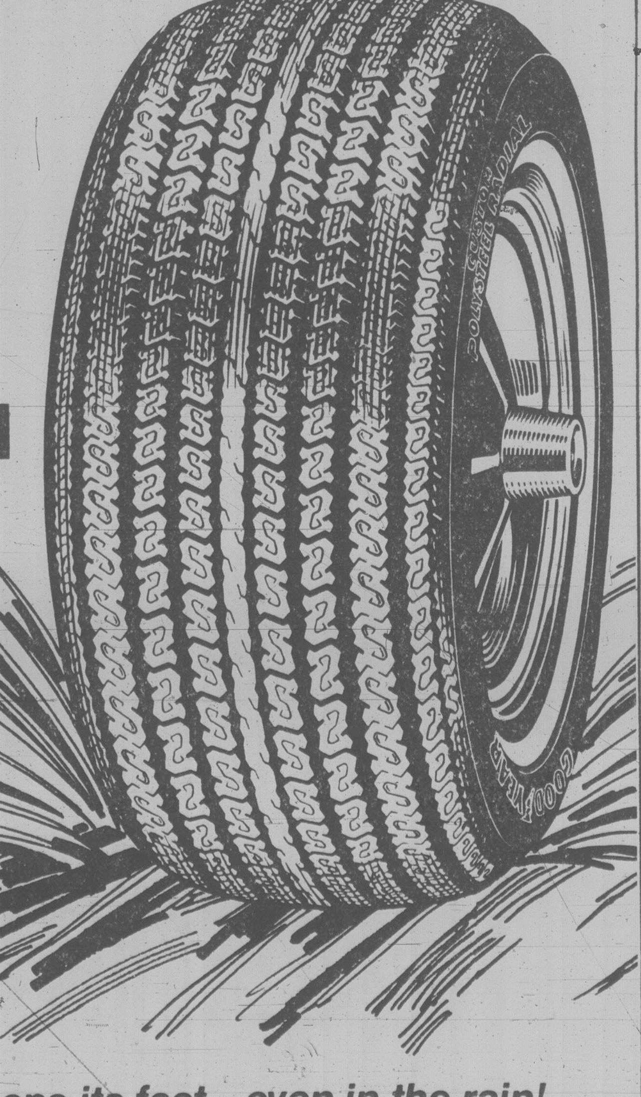
Sale ends April 21.



The tire that keeps its feet —even in the rain!

From now until April 21, you can save on Goodyear's Polysteel Radial. This is Goodyear's top line steel belted radial with all of the performance features you would expect:
- Extra Long-Lasting – Radial construction and steel belts virtually eliminate tread squirm, a chief cause of tire wear
- Better Gas Mileage – Radials have lower rolling resistance than bias-ply tires, resulting in noticeable fuel savings
- Safety – Double steel belts help protect against impact breaks. Radial plies eliminate inner friction to give a cooler running tire.
- Traction & Control – Radial design keeps the tread firmly on the road to provide sure-footed grip
- Smooth Ride – Polyester cord body gives a quiet, cushioned ride

Sports That Didn't Rate Olympics

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (AP) — Tennis and badminton are at the head of a long line of sports wanting to be included in the Olympic Games. But they will have to wait a long time.

The International Olympic Committee did nothing to hurry them along at its session that ended last week. The International Tennis Federation hoped to get in as a demonstration sport at Los Angeles in 1984, but the IOC decided there would be no demonstration sports.

The IOC is sympathetic to tennis, which had a place in the Olympics until 1924. The Program Commission reported the ITF has set up a separate committee for amateur players and is in line with the Olympic eligibility code. But the ITF has been asked to fill out a questionnaire and has not sent it back.

"When we get the answers we want, we will go on studying the matter," said Arpad Csanadi, chairman of the commission.

Badminton has a different problem. Asian and African countries split off from the International Badminton Federation a year ago and formed a federation of their own. The IOC likes dealing with one controlling body for each sport.

For the same reason, the IOC declined to recognize billiards and karate. It also turned down tug of war, powerlifting, boule (a form of bowling in which the balls are thrown instead of rolled), water skiing and squash.

Official recognition was given to the federation controlling nine-pin and ten-pin bowling, but that does not mean bowling will be in the Olympic Games. It may be included in regional games, like the Asian and Pan-American, which enjoy the IOC's patronage.

The IOC is reluctant to expand the Olympics further. There are 21 sports in the Summer Games and five in the Winter Games, and many people think that is too many.

"It is a complicated subject and a very difficult one to deal with fairly," Csanadi said. "On one hand, we have critics saying the program should be reduced for the sake of the host city, but it is the host cities themselves who demand more and more sports."

The IOC session left swimming officials happy. Three events — the 200-metre medley relays for men and women and the 200-metre freestyle relay for men — were added to the program.

The IOC will spend the next few months trying to get the two Chinas together to work out names for their Olympic committees, and flags and anthems to be used. It will be difficult because the rival delegations here not spoken to each other all week. "But I am very hopeful that we can achieve something at last," said Lord Killanin, president of the IOC. "Both sides have made remarkable concessions already."

Campbell Resigns

DENVER (AP) — Munson Campbell resigned from the executive of Colorado Rockies on Tuesday, calling the current state of the National Hockey League club a "disaster."

The announcement followed Rockies president Armand Pohan's announcement Monday that the team would remain in Denver for the 1979-80 NHL season — after compiling the worst record in the league this year.

In making that announcement, Pohan had said he was considering some changes in front-office personnel.

"Mr. Pohan and I had a long discussion this morning and I think that we agreed the franchise is a disaster," Campbell said in a telephone interview. "And we had a very honest disagreement as to how it should be salvaged."

Campbell declined to discuss specifics of his disagreement with Pohan, nor would he say what changes needed to be made. But he said the Rockies need "major surgery."

All-Time Blues Leader, Unger Just Wants Out

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Garry Unger, holder of the records for most goals, assists and points for St. Louis Blues and the nearest thing the team has had to a superstar, has probably played his last game for St. Louis.

"I don't know what good it would do me or the team to sign with the Blues (next year)," said Unger, who finished his eighth season with the team.

"I've gone stale," the blonde forward said. "What this team needs is a complete change of attitude. They have to start all over, bringing in people with a fresh, winning attitude and that means getting rid of everyone who's been around here for more than a year or two. And that includes me."

Unger becomes a free agent July 1 and, while he stops short of saying he will not sign with the Blues, he makes it obvious that it is highly unlikely.

"You get to losing as much as we have the last few years and it just gets you down," he said. "I have a lot to lose if I leave St. Louis. I have a farm here that is like a boyhood dream come true. But hockeywise, I've gone stale. I don't think I can help this team any more."

Gervin Repeats As NBA Point Leader

NEW YORK (AP) — George Gervin of San Antonio Spurs led the National Basketball Association in scoring for the second consecutive year, finishing with a 29.6 average.

Gervin beat San Diego's Lloyd Free, who averaged 28.8, for the scoring title and became the sixth player in NBA history to win consecutive championships.

Milwaukee's Marques Johnson was third with a 25.6 average. McAdoo of Boston (24.8), and Moses Malone of Houston (24.8) were next. Denver's David Thompson finished sixth with a 24.0 average.

Kevin Porter of Detroit led the league in assists with an average of 13.4 a game and became the first player in league history to surpass 1,000 assists when he finished with 1,099.

Senior Ladies Curling Club To Expand

Anne Gamble has been elected president of the Victoria and District Seniors Ladies Curling Club which plans to expand in the 1979-80 season.

Gamble was elected following a luncheon marking the end of the first season of the club. Rita Wallin was elected vice-president and Lois Klassen, secretary-treasurer.

The club, for ladies 50 years and over, was formed last year so that the senior ladies could have their own identity, and to promote stronger rinks to repreent area clubs in senior bonspiels and competitions.

Ice time was aranged at the Juan de Fuca Club Wednesday afternoons. Additional sheets of ice have been obtained for next year and new members, as teams, or as idividuals, are welcome.

Interested curlers should phone Gamble at 478-2333.

First-place honors for the Juan de Fuca Curling Association Trophy went to the foursome of Bertha Robertson, Lois Klassen, Loyis Schmidt and Mabel Irwin.

The Fashion Two-Twenty, Irma Piper Trophy was awarded to Joan Farnham, Nancy Baker, Daisy Dicker and Elsie Calloway.

Turcotte Files $100M Race Suit

MINEOLA, N.Y. (AP) — Ron Turcotte, a native of Grand Falls, N.B., is suing the New York Racing Association and others for $100 million in damages as the result of a spill last July at Belmont Park which resulted in the jockey being paralysed from the waist down.

The suit was filed here in the Supreme Court.

James Heffernan, president of the NYRA which operates Belmont Park, was quoted as saying that the NYRA has insurance but not enough to cover the amount asked in the suit. He said a meeting with the insurance company would have to be set up to determine a reply to the suit.

Other defendants in the suit are jockey Jeffrey Fell of Mississauga, Ont.; David Reynolds, a horse owner; stewards E. J. (Tony) Kelly, Gerard Burke and Kenneth Noe and The Jockey Club.

Turcotte, who gained fame as rider of Triple Crown champion Secretariat in 1973, was aboard Flag of Leyte Gulf when the spill occurred.

Expansion Begins

QUEBEC (CP) — Four firms have been contracted to start the $15 million expansion of the Colisee, home of the Quebec Nordiques, says Mayor Jean Pelletier.

The city will receive federal and provincial funds to bring the capacity of the arena to 15,013 by December 1980. The Colisee is among four Canadian hockey arenas offered expansion money last month by federal Minister of Fitness and Amateur Sport Iona Campagnolo.

The Nordiques, with three other World Hockey Association teams — Edmonton Oilers, Winnipeg Jets and New England Whalers — have accepted terms of an agreement by which they are to join the National Hockey League for the 1979-80 season as expansion clubs.

Liverpool Boosts Lead

LONDON (Reuter) — Alan Hansen's goal stretched Liverpool's lead at the top of the English League First Division soccer race to six points Tuesday with a 1-0 win over Wolverhampton Wanderers.

Ian Wallace scored two goals and Steve Hunt got one to put Coventry ahead 3-1 at the half. However, Everton rallied on goals by Bob Latchford, his 20th of the season, and by Brian Kidd to tie the score. Trevor Ross scored Everton's first-half goal.

In another First Division game, Bristol City put Chelsea closer to the Second Division with a 3-1 triumph.

One of the Bristol goals was scored by Dutchman Geert Meyer, who has sparked the club to four successive wins since joining the team from Ajax of Amsterdam.

Billy Ashcroft gave Middlesbrough a 1-0 home win over Leeds United, which dropped to sixth place, one below Football Association (FA) Cup finalist Arsenal, a 1-0 winner over Tottenham.

Five Finds Of Gas By Shell

EDMONTON (CP3 — Shell Canada Resources Ltd. announced Tuesday that it has made five natural gas discoveries.

Three of the finds are in Alberta and two in British Columbia.

Two of the Alberta discoveries are in the Peace River area and the third is 280 kilometres north of Edmonton in the Utikuma Lake-Wabasca oil sands area.

The well with the greatest flow rate is 140 kilometres north of Grande Prairie and 70 kilometres northwest of Peace River.

Shell said it was drilled to a total depth of 1,165 metres and flowed at a stable reate of 118,000 cubic metres daily. The well is located on an acerage 100 per cent owned by Shell.

In British Columbia, a well 60 kilometres northeast of Fort Nelson was drilled to a depth of 2,480 metres and a production test flowed at a stable rate of 113,000 cubic metres a day.

Ont. Hydro Plans N-Plants Despite Three Mile Island

TORONTO (UPC) — After a four-year delay, Ontario Hydro plans to go ahead with two proposed nuclear power stations despite the recent near-disaster at Three Mile Island in Pennsylvania.

The publicly-owned utility said Tuesday it will proceed with the two plants as well as a coal-fired plant for Atikokan in Northwestern Ontario.

While the utility is paying close attention to the developments in Pennsylvania, it is determined not to let the incident delay plans for nuclear units at Douglas Point and Darlington beyond the four years they have already been suspended.

Chairman Robert Taylor said the Hydro board had received a report on the nuclear accident in the United States and this week will file comparative reports on its own CANDU reactor system to the Atomic Energy Control Board.

"If the situation eventually shows that there are even more improvements we can make to our operating or safety systems, that will certainly be done," Taylor said.

"In the meantime, there is no cause for concern about the safe operation of Ontario Hydro's nuclear plants."

Taylor said the board decided to extend construction schedules for the three new plants so as to gradually bring capacity into phase with projected electricity demands.

The government-owned utility had been uncertain about its construction schedule because in recent years it has over-estimated the demand for electricity. It now has an excess generating capacity of 42 per cent.

"Although cancellation of Atikokan could be the most economic course," Taylor said, "the only reliable alternative to it is the construction of an east-west transmission interconnection to move power to the northwest from the rest of Ontario."

Taylor said that under the new construction schedule the two coal-fired Atikokan units will begin operating in 1984 and 1988 respectively. The initial service dates were 1983 and 1984.

The first two nuclear power station units at Bruce, Ont., will remain on schedule for completion in 1983 and 1984 but the two final units will be in service in 1986 and 1987, a year later than originally planned.

At Darlington, Ont., projected completion of the first two units was extended 18 months to 1987 and 1988 and the final two units to 1989 and 1990.

Train Kills Youth

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — A man who saw his 14-year-old son crushed under a train's wheels became hysterical, shot and killed two persons and wounded two others, the newspaper Al Ahram reported. It said the father was quarrelling with the train's conductor about a ticket for his son when the boy jumped off the train and into the path of another train.

Tanker-Spill Cleanup Starts

HALIFAX (CP) — Canadian Coast Guard crews were preparing Tuesday to clean up of about 7,000 tons of bunker C oil spilled when the British tanker Kurdistan broke in ice in the Cabot Strait March 15.

Small pans of oil have been washing up daily on the Cape Breton shore, mainly near Arichat, N.S., but most of the oil is being held on ice offshore along 96 kilometres of Nova Scotia coastline.

The 10-man, round-the-clock operation was scheduled to begin today and was expected to take a week to 10 days. It will use a 91-metre ocean-going barge fitted with special oil-recovery equipment.

The barge will be escorted by tugs and three 15-metre fishing boats with hauling gear modified.

Age Gap Splitting Families

OTTAWA (CP) — There has been an unprecedented trend toward age segregation in the last three decades, raising doubts about the continued importance of the family-based values of sharing and responsibility, says a government study released Tuesday.

The 150-page analysis of changes in the family was done by Statistics Canada demographer Sylvia Wargon as part of the federal agency's recent series on trends in Canadian life.

She concludes that persons in the main age groups within the population — infancy, youth, young parenthood, middle age, early old age and old age — are increasingly grouping themselves by age. This means the concept of the "generation gap," which became popular in the 1960s, is only a partial picture of a society moving toward a whole series of generation gaps.

The major new age group in the cross-section of households is elderly people — especially women — living alone instead of with their families. There has also been a marked increase in the number of young people of both sexes who choose to move away from their families.

The author attributes these tends to improved life expectancy in the last 30 years, post-war affluence which allows the young and old to set up their own households, more small housing units, more government social benefits and health programs, an increase in marriage break-up and the fact that many young women are postponing marriage and living alone for several years.

"The rapid growth of the one-person, non-family living arrangement, by both young and old, raises the question of what the effects will be on family sentiment and on the values of sharing and caring . . . presumably learned within the traditional family household."

She says there is little doubt the traditional family is still the basic social institution.

"But more and more Canadians no longer consider the traditional family form as permanent, life-long sancrosanct and mainly oriented towards childbearing and ch ld-rearing."

This relaxing of traditional family concepts has led to a wide diversity in lifestyles. Some examples of alternative living arrangements include:

—Single-person households represented 13.4 per cent of the total in 1971 compared with 7.4 per cent in 1951.

—Two or more individuals living as a household although not related by family ties increased to 4.9 per cent in 1971 from 3.9 per cent in 1951.

—In 1971 the percentage of families headed by women was 16.5 per cent compared with 11.8 per cent in 1956.

—Between 1951 and 1971 the proportion of families headed by divorced persons increased to 1.1 per cent from 0.3 per cent.

—The percentage headed by never-married individuals increased during the same period to 0.7 per cent from 0.1 per cent.

—The median age of female heads of one-parent families dropped between 1951 and 1971. This means fewer women became family heads through the death of their husband, and more chose this role either through divorce or never marrying.

The author says it is essential to investigate the effects on children of growing up with one parent.

She urges sociologists to find out how children are affected in their formative years by separation or divorce and by the subsequent remarriage of one or both of their parents.

The author advises that all the trends she has discovered since the end of the Second World War have come at a time of great material wealth. She says it is possible that worsening economic conditions could lead to great changes in individual lifestyles and family living arrangements.

This was one of the major long-term results of the Depression of the 1930s, she says.

Ont. Taxman Hits Cigs, Booze, Gas

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Treasurer Frank Miller cut into consumer pocketbooks Tuesday, unveiling a 1979 budget in which tax increases outnumbered reductions or exemptions by a 3-to-1 ratio.

Placing much of the increased burden on smokers, drinkers and motorists, he also took the unpopular step of raising hospital insurance premiums.

Miller, presenting his first budget since becoming treasurer last summer, imposed a 5.3 per cent increase on the hospital premiums, amounting to $2 monthly for families and $1 for single subscribers.

Miller's budget brought in tax increases of $269 million and tax cuts of $88 million but left unchanged the basic provincial sales tax and the personal income tax rate.

Miller said the minority Progressive Conservative government, which will operate with a deficit of $1.153 billion this year, will strive for a balanced budget by 1984.

Both Liberal and New Democratic Party spokesmen criticized the budget.

However, Liberal financial critic David Peterson did not believe it was bad enough to force an election.

NDP Leader Michael Cassidy was undecided whether to move a non-confidence motion in the government over the hospital premium increase.

Most tax increases are effective today and include two cents on a package of 20 cigarettes and slight increases also on cut tobacco and cigars.

The price of a 24-bottle case of beer is increased by 10 cents, a 25-ounce bottle of spirits and a 26-ounce bottle of table wine and champagne go up 20 cents.

Motorists will pay a tax of 4.6 cents a litre for gasoline, up from 4.2 cents.

Miller eliminated succession duties and gift taxation, reduced to 30 from 40 per cent the top marginal tax rate for mining, gave a tax rebate on materials for home-built solar heating units, eliminated the sales tax on household smoke alarms, yard goods and clothing patterns for household use and eliminated the retail sales tax on aircraft and parts for licensed commercial and cargo services.

He raised the land transfer tax to two-fifths of one per cent on the first $45,000 of a real-estate transaction and to four-fifths of one per cent of the remainder. This would result in an additional $45 tax on the purchase of a $60,000 house.

He also imposed first-time tax on diesel fuel for railway locomotives and raised other diesel fuel tax, and extended the sales tax to all telecommunications equipment such as telex, teletype and cable television. Previously only telephone and telegraph services were taxed.

The general rate of corporate tax was increased to 14 from 13 per cent, with exemptions including income from manufacturing, processing, mining, fishing, logging and farming. The higher rate applies to financial institutions, transportation, wholesale and retail groups making up about 55 per cent of the tax base.

Miller said he hopes to create 70,000 jobs this year with $79-million earmarked for youth employment but gave no immediate details of that plan.

Clark's 'a Joker', says Broadbent

ELECTION 79

By PAUL WHITELAW

MONTREAL (FP) — NDP Leader Ed Broadbent, launching his most strongly-worded campaign attack so far on Joe Clark's leadership ability, said last night the Conservative leader should be dismissed as a "joker."

"Joe Clark is not a serious politician. He's not a great politician. He's a joker," Broadbent told a crowd of about 250 NDP supporters in suburban Ste. Anne de Bellevue.

Speaking in French, the NDP leader added: "He changes his ideas like he changes his shirts."

Later, he returned to the theme of Clark's alleged political incompetence saying in English: "Joe Clark can't make up his mind and hold it for more than 24 hours."

Although the crowd who turned up to nominate NDP candidates in suburban Lachine and Vaudreuil ridings was predominantly anglophone, Broadbent — with an obvious eye on the presence of French-language TV crews — alternated on a 50-50 basis between the two languages.

Addressing the issue of national unity, the NDP leader said Prime Minister Trudeau had managed over the past 11 years "to polarize and create tension" in Quebec.

But he reiterated his pledge to resist Trudeau's attempts to make unity the dominant issue of the election.

Broadbent said the PM was campaigning on the need for national unity "because he does not want to talk about the economy, unemployment and energy."

He said unity should not be an issue as defined by the PM because "Joe Clark is a federalist, Pierre Trudeau is a federalist, Ed Broadbent is a federalist.

"There is not a bit of difference on this issue among the three leaders."

However, Broadbent got off another shot at the PM and sparked applause when he said Trudeau had given people of the province the choice of "being Quebecers or being Canadians."

Referring to the Task Force Report on National Unity, the NDP leader said he was in agreement with co-chairman Jean-Luc Pepin in saying to voters of the province they could be "both Quebecers and Canadians."

Aiming his attack once more at Clark, he said the Tory leader believed the "law is not for the politicians."

That was a reference to Clark's statement March 30 that the RCMP should be allowed to carry out illegal acts if the police force first obtains approval from a senior cabinet minister.

Broadbent also repeated his now-standard campaign themes, saying Canadians should gain more control of their resources from foreign corporations and criticizing the Liberal record on inflation and unemployment.

Federal Socreds In Trouble

KAMLOOPS (CP) — The federal Social Credit party has only one candidate nominated in British Columbia and is in big trouble in the province, Ben Bissett, the party's B.C. region president said Tuesday.

"To be frank, we're at a low ebb due to the change in the leadership," Bissett said, referring to the recent installation of Fabien Roy of Quebec as interim party leader.

Unemployment 'National Sickness'

ELECTION 79

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Unemployment, once a regional or seasonal problem in Canada, has become a national sickness under the Trudeau government, Conservative Leader Joe Clark said Tuesday night.

On the third day of campaigning for the May 22 general election in southern Ontario, Clark said a dangerous pattern is developing in the unemployment rate.

Although Statistics Canada figures released Monday showed 967,000 persons unable to find jobs in March, the real figure is more than one million, Clark told about 500 party workers here.

Unemployment was becoming a way of life for some Canadians and such an attitude posed dangers not only to individuals but to the entire nation.

The government of Prime Minister Trudeau government was accepting unemployment as a fact of life and was urging Canadians to learn to live with less.

Conservatives, however, believed Canadians who wanted to work should be able to find it.

Clark took what for him is a unique step of concentrating on one subject — unemployment — for an entire day as he travelled by bus throughout this region regarded as crucial to the election hopes of all three parties.

He talked of it in Dunnville, Tillsonburg, Simcoe, Port Colborne and Niagara Falls.

The Statistics Canada figures released on the same day said unemployment in March was 22,000 higher than the previous month but that the seasonally-adjusted jobless rate remained unchanged at 7.9 per cent of the work force.

Clark noted to reporters that Prime Mininster Trudeau told a Vancouver heckler to get off his ass and find work. Trudeau was attacking the unemployed rather than unemployment.

He told his listeners the idle workers are no longer to be found only in distant part of the country, but in what Clark called the industrial heartland.

About half of the unemployed were under the age of 25 and many had been without work for more than three months.

He said the party plan to help Canadians buy houses through income tax deductions would provide 100,000 new jobs in its first year.

Clark said Canadians invested $4 billion to create jobs outside of the country, partly because they distrusted the federal government.

If the $4 billion had been invested in Canada there would be work for an other 200,000.

The Liberal government tried to put Canadians to work with state projects, ignoring the fact that the private sector provided 97 per cent of the jobs.

Conservative plans to return more money to private industry through tax incentives would help provide additional jobs, Clark said.

At Port Colborne he said the Liberals threw away possible jobs through a policy of not building ships in Canada.

Ex-Liberal MP Again Denied Tory Banner

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — Ralph Stewart, the former Liberal MP who recently switched to the Tories, was out in the cold at another nomination meeting Tuesday.

Al Campbell, vice-president of the Sudbury Conservative riding association, said Stewart told the association he understood there was a certain amount of support for him and that he would run if he were nominated.

But only two persons were nominated by delegates and Peter Hope, 42, won by a vote of 88 to 76 against Rev. Roy Taylor.

PM Tries Oil Squirt In Alberta

By JOHN MARSHALL

CALGARY (FP) — Prime Minister Trudeau Tuesday tried pouring some Liberal oil policies on the politically troubled waters of the Alberta petroleum industry.

In this area, Liberals — including big Jack Horner — are seen as an endangered species. But Trudeau won a respectful hearing a the Petroleum Club from about 300 oil men. They're a group generally disenchanted with Ottawa's involvement in their particular bastion of free enterprise.

However, as one said afterwards, " a fine speech. He changed a few minds, but not enough."

Another said of the conversationally-like low-key talk, "he knows how to play his audience." Another : "Well, no one here was irritated (a lustier epithet was used) by him."

About 15 of them were questioned as they crowded out through richly-panelled lobbies back to the real world of commerce. Most dismissed the event with "nothing new" shrugs, though they said Trudeau had done a good job. He had quite a bit to make them happy. He said his government wanted to see a fourth tar sands oil plant started to help Canada achieve a one million barrels a day of oil production by 1990 to lessen dependence on imports.

He stressed again the need for a strong federal government to seek and if necessary, enforce, compromises between provincial governments and the country as a whole. This particularly applied he said, in the matter of resources such as oil.

And he raised the spectre of a time when Alberta might decide it has so much in its Heritage Fund and in government surpluses that it might want to discourage further petroleum production for a period using such methods as an increase in royalties.

At such times a federal initiative might be required to enforce continuing production for the benefit of the rest of Canada, Trudeau said.

He commented that he was "reputed to be a fighter." (Part of his personal and party strategy is to build his rough guy image.)

"But I'm a rather gentle fellow." There were chuckles from around the breakfast tables. "And I only fight with those who want to fight with me, whether it be hecklers, provincial premiers or foreign governments." The statement was interrupted by one of the few bursts of applause for an address that had few if any oratorical tricks, a trip that he pitched it as though he was sitting with his listeners for a cozy chat in their board rooms.

In a meeting later at a Calgary high school, he fielded questions from an enthusiastic audience of about 1,500 which happily applauded every answer.

He was asked how he felt about the presence in his party of Jack Horner, a man who, the questioner said, once called him a Hitler. The former Conservative, on the stage with his leader, put his head down and blushed.

Trudeau said Horner had told him he never had called him Hitler but that even if he had, he (Trudeau) would still be proud to have Horner in the party.

In Regina Tuesday night, about 1,000 people jammed a hotel ballroom to see the prime minister. If they were not all Liberals, as some said, they still happily applauded the standard Trudeau call for support fora strong central government "for the common good of the whole people."

And they laughed with him when he got tangled up and talked about "sexual origins and racial origins." He recovered — "I guess we all have the same sexual origins."

They applauded him when, noting he had been introduced as a gentle person, he said "I am, providing they don't try to push Canada around."

The "gentle person" may be a recurring phrase. There has been some concern among his aides for the reaction to the way Canada's prime minister has been attacking the "little man" hecklers.

PM's Visit To Hotel Creates Ripples

CALGARY (CP) — A mix-up at a city hotel where Prime Minister Trudeau was staying Tuesday left a handful of angry businessmen in the wake of the Liberal leader's visit.

Trudeau decided to take a swim in the Calgary Inn's rooftop pool shortly after noon. But when he took the elevator up to the pool, it's doors were discreetly locked behind him, leaving a knot of persons wearing out their fingers leaning on the elevator button.

Hotel manager Arthur Oades explained that the elevator was shut down for security reasons but someone also locked the hotel's second elevator by mistake, leaving some guests in the 19-storey tower stranded.

"We didn't know about it until a customer complained," said Oades.

Ken Bassam, a Toronto businessman, said he had to wait more than 20 minutes before a bellhop finally took him to his room on the service elevator to retrieve an urgently needed document. He said about 30 persons were waiting in the lobby.

"If I'd have known he was staying here, I'd have stayed somewhere else," said Bassam.

$100,000 Oils Noose Campaign

TORONTO (UPC) — Canadian policemen and prison guards plan to spend $100,000 to defeat the "airy-fairy" arguments against the death penalty and make restoration of capital punishment an issue in the federal election campaign.

Phil Jamieson, president of the 52,000-member Canadian Police Association, said Tuesday none of the party leaders has addressed himself to the problem of rising crime, and that Canadians consider it a more important issue than national unity.

Living next door to the most violent country in the world, Jamieson said, many Canadians fear for their safety on the streets. Strict law and order is needed to prevent any "spin-off" in violence from the United States.

"National unity is probably a fairly remote issue to individuals in matters of individual conscience," he said.

"Personal security — that is, walking down the street — is extremely important to the individual. Social security is probably exemplified by capital punishment or the deterrent aspect that we have absolutely no doubt exists."

The police association and the 12,000-member Union of Solicitor-General Employees will spend $100,000 on an advertising campaign to make capital punishment an election issue. "MPs and candidates must stand up and be counted," Jamieson said.

"It is frankly rubbish to say the death penalty is cruel and unusual and the other airy-fairy things that are brought up."

He said the solicitor-general and many MPs know nothing of crime. "The nearest they see a crime is when they read about it in the newspaper. They just don't have any idea what it's all about and it's damn well time they did."

Dailly To Face Same Socred

Cliff Oswald has been nominated to represent the Social Credit party in the May 10 provincial election in Burnaby North riding.

Oswald came within 124 votes of defeating Eileen Dailly of the NDP for the seat in the 1975 British Columbia election. Mrs. Dailly has been nominated by the NDP this year.

Dendy defeated two other hopefuls. In 1975, Dendy finished about 6,000 votes behind Bennett, although he noted that the NDP's share of the popular vote in the riding increased by eight per cent.

Joan Norris, 65, widow of Tom Norris, former B.C. appeal court justice, won the NDP nomination for Dewdney riding, which was represented in the last house by George Mussallem of the Social Credit party.

No Reins Planned On Rights Remarks

Labor Minister Allan Williams told Human Rights Commission chairman Margartet Strongitharm Tuesday he plans no action over the controversial meeting in which commissioners made derisive remarks about women and homosexuals.

Norrie Preston, a member of the Canadian Advisory Council on the Status of Women and its human rights committee, said the remarks of some members were like a boys' locker room.

Mrs. Strongitharm said the remarks were made without intent or ulterior movtives.

She said they were blown out of proportion by the one member of the press who was in attendance, and said future meeting would be well advertised so more public and press would attend.

One of the members of the commission, Jock Smith, was a member of the Surrey school board when it was accused of human rights violations in 1976 and 1978.

In the 1976 incident, the board was found guilty of violating the B.C. Human Rights Code. It subsequently agreed to drop its religous restrictions for employment and to make a statement reaffirming its support of the code.

The board had advertised for a Judeo-Christian principal.

The 1978 case involved discrimination against women with pregnancy-related illnesses.

The school board was found guilty and teacher Vivian Warren received $3,609 in benefits she had been denied because of her sickness.

BCRIC Hurdle Lifted For Share Applicants

B.C. citizens over 16 years of age who do not have a driver's licence and a social insurance number are still eligible to get their five free B.C. Resources Investment Corp. shares, a corporation spokesman said Tuesday.

Regulations governing the distribution of the free shares say two pieces of identification must be produced, and list a driver's licence, social security card or medical insurance plan card.

Persons over 16, the youngest age for share applicants, have said they couldn't apply for the shares because they have neither a driver's licence nor a social insurance card.

BCRIC president Dave Helliwell said citizens who do not have two of the three as required, can obtain their shares by making one more stop — the government agent's office.

Once the agent is satisfied the applicant meets the requirements, a special card is issued to enable the recipient to register for the five free shares, and purchase others at $6 each to a maximum of 5,000, he said.

Helliwell declined to disclose the number of orders received to date for the shares.

The shares for children under 16 are applied for by their mother who has to produce a medical plan number or a birth certificate. For those over 65 years, only one piece of identification is needed including the government's pharmacare card.

Teachers' Fed Non-Partisan

B.C. '79

The B.C. Teachers' Federation has adopted a non-partisan position on the May 10 provincial election.

Federation president Pat Brady said Tuesday that his group will support individual candidates who have education policies similar to those desired by the teachers.

Brady told a news conference that the 30,000-member federation is not pleased with the shifting of financing from the provincial government to local taxpayers under the Social Credit government.

"We believe that education financing is seriously out of balance in the province," said Brady. "The next government should accept the advice of the McMath Royal Commission on Taxation which recommended that the province pay 75 per cent of the costs of public schools."

Brady said the federation will attempt to get commitments from provincial party leaders and from individual candidates to support teacher policies.

It said it has been a non-issue campaign so far, fought on the old question of free enterprise as opposed to socialism. He said there are significant issues in education which need to be met.

Brady said public education in B.C. costs $1.7 billion a year and local authorities are forced to raise $600 million of that amount.

He said the 79 local teacher associations in B.C. will be asked to organize their members to vote for candidates who support public education.

Bennett had said he would only debate the NDP if party leader Dave Barrett, former cabinet minister Bob Williams and Jim Kinnaird, B.C. Labor Federation president, appeared together against him.

He did not mention the Liberals or Conservatives.

Grits Unsure Here

The provincial Liberal party hasn't yet decided if it will field candidates in the Victoria riding.

The party is concentrating its efforts in two North Vancouver seats for the May 10 election. Leader Jev Tothill is running in Seymour and the party will field a candidate in Capilano, the riding once held by former leader Gordon Gibson.

Party policy chairman Frank Preston of Victoria says the local association will hold a meeting next week to decide if local candidates will be put on the ballot.

NDP Not Amused

Port McNeill Mayor Gerry Furney has local NDP officials less than pleased with the literature he is using in his provincial election bid for the Social Credit party.

Furney, running in the Vancouver Island North constituency, is distributing "NDP-for-Furney" pamphlets with asterisks indicating the letters NDP stand for No Damn Parachutists.

UBC to Woo High Schools

VANCOUVER (CP) — The University of British Columbia has approved spending $159,000 on a program to improve accessibility to the university for B.C. high school students.

UBC will launch a pilot project this summer with five high schools chosen as representative of the various schools in the province. The schools are Sir Charles Tupper in Vancouver, Hazelton Secondary in the Terrace School District, Lillooet Secondary, North Peace Secondary in Fort St. John, and Charleson Secondary in Ocean Falls.

Representatives of the five schools have been invited to the UBC campus this summer to confer with appropriate university personnel at a planning workshop. A major aim will be to determine why some students come on to university while others do not.

UBC also will provide special $750 bursaries for two students from each of the five high schools. The awards will be made on the recommendations of the schools to students who might not normally have the financial resources to go to the university.

UBC will also expand its distribution of printed and audio-visual material to secondary schools throughout the province, including special material aimed at low-income students.

Truck Dynamited

SURREY (CP) — RCMP Tuesday were investigating the second dynamite attack in this Vancouver suburb this month.

Police say a dynamite blast Monday night heavily damaged the engine of a transport truck. On April 1, a dynamite attack wrecked a Surrey service station.

Report in June

QUESNEL (CP) — Robert Bonner, chairman of B.C. Hydro, says a final report on the feasibility of a hog fuel-fired generating plant for the Quesnel area will be completed by June.

Hydro is interested in two possible sites in the Quesnel area. The plant will be used to dispose of wood wastes.

Bonner says a final decision will depend on the availability of land, hog-fuel transport facilities, rail access and environmental acceptance.

New Delta Mayor

DELTA (CP) — Ald. Ernest Burnett was named mayor of this Vancouver area municipality by acclamation Tuesday after he was the only person to file nomination papers by the noon deadline.

Delta has been without a mayor since March 15 when former mayor Tom Goode resigned after filing for personal bankruptcy.

Murder Charged

QUESNEL (CP) — Frank John Weigl, 30, of Quesnel was charged with second-degree murder Tuesday after a 76-year-old man died following an altercation on a city street.

RCMP said Boyce Fraser Hubley of Quesnel died instantly after being struck by another person.

Two Days Of Court

When Sidney's provincial court reopens Sept. 1 it will probably be manned on a part-time basis.

Dennis Shepherd, assistant deputy attorney-general in charge of courts, said the court will likely operate two days a week.

The court was closed in 1973 and since then cases have been heard in the provincial court in Victoria.

Lowly Onion Gives Rise To These Family Favorites

My family is fond of onions as a vegetable specialty, in a medley of vegetables or in combination with meats. So I'm planning to feature them often.

Quality onions will be firm, well-shaped and dry with a shiny, crackly skin. And of course there should be no evidence of sprouting. They are marked Canada No. 1.

Onions come in 2-, 3-, 5- or 10-pound plastic or mesh bags. There are about five medium onions in a pound. When serving onion as a vegetable dish, plan on using eight to 10 onions to serve six.

Keep dry onions in a cool, dry, well-ventilated place in a single layer if possible. Dry and uncooked, they'll keep for up to four months. Cooked onions will keep in the refrigerator for up to five days. Chopped onions, if properly packed in freezer bags or containers, will keep for up to a year in the freezer.

SWEET AND SOUR ONIONS
Makes 6 servings

8 to 10 medium onions, peeled (about 1½ pounds)
¾ cup boiling water with ½ teaspoon salt
¼ cup brown sugar
2 tablespoons cornstarch
¼ teaspoon dry mustard
⅛ teaspoon ginger
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon chili powder
1 cup tomato juice
½ cup water
2 tablespoons vinegar

Cut onions in half. Cook in boiling salted water for 15 to 20 minutes until tender. Drain. Combine sugar, cornstarch, mustard, ginger, salt and chili powder in a small saucepan. Gradually blend in tomato juice, water and vinegar. Stir and cook until thickened and clear. Simmer, stirring occasionally, five minutes. Pour over onions.

ONION AND MASHED POTATO SPECIAL
Makes 6 servings

2 pounds potatoes
3 medium fresh onions, peeled and coarsely chopped
¾ cup milk
¼ cup butter or margarine
Salt and pepper

Peel and cut potatoes in small pieces. Cook potatoes with onions in small amount of boiling salted water in covered saucepan or 15 to 20 minutes until potatoes are just tender. Drain, if necessary. Add milk and butter or margarine to potatoes in pan. Heat until butter or margarine is melted. Mash with a potato masher or beat with electric mixer until fluffy. Season to taste with salt and pepper.

FRESH ONION BISCUIT PIE
Makes 6 to 8 servings

1 cup chopped fresh onions
3 tablespoons butter or margarine
2 cups packaged biscuit mix
½ cup water

Saute onions in 2 tablespoons butter or margarine until limp; set aside. Stir together biscuit mix and water with a fork to make a soft dough. Smooth dough into a ball on lightly floured board. Knead five times. Roll out one-half dough into a seven-inch circle. Fit into a lightly buttered nine-inch pie plate. Spread sauteed onions over surface. Roll out remaining dough into a nine-inch circle. Fit dough over onions. Melt remaining butter or margarine; brush over surface. Bake in 425-degree F. oven 15 minutes or until lightly browned. Cut into wedges to serve.

ONIONS AND APPLES
Makes 4 servings

2 tablespoons butter or bacon drippings
5 medium onions, peeled and sliced
4 apples, peeled, cored and sliced
2 tablespoons brown sugar
1 teaspoon salt

Heat butter or bacon drippings in a frying pan. Add onion and apple slices. Cover and simmer over low heat about 10 minutes, stirring occasionally, until apples are soft and onion tender but not brown. Sprinkle with sugar and season with salt. Stir and let stand one to two minutes until sugar melts. Serve with poultry, pork or veal.

SLICK TRICKS — To prevent tears when handling onions try peeling them under running water. Some cooks I know swear that holding a piece of dry bread in their mouth during the peeling process helps. All I'm sure of is that the quicker you peel, the fewer the tears.

—To cut neat rings, cut onions into crosswise slices, then carefully separate the slices into rings.

—Remove the odor of onions from your hands by rubbing them with salt, lemon or celery salt after handling onions.

From sensible

The most delicate skin you own is right under your eyes. It's very fragile, and it requires very special care. In France, Lancôme created a remarkable new cream just for this fragile skin. It actually minimizes tiny dry lines and can help new ones from appearing prematurely. Sensible, non? Progrès Eye Creme.

Look for the Freshest Vegetables

hilda beastall

Look for the freshest vegetables you can find when buying at this time of spring, for the need for their extra nutrition is likely at its peak after the winter seson of low sun intensity.

It makes sense to buy those which are seldom seen frozen or canned, particularly when known to be useful sources of nutrients.

Among these desirables, when their prices seem to fit the budget at the moment, are avocados and bananas, both rich in a wide range of food values. Both also can be used without preparation just as they come from their protective skins, so they hardly need recipes.

Celery is another food useful for its nutrients, though in a different way. Advertised often at a price between 25 and 40 cents a head, this vegetable keeps well for three or four days in the refrigerator in a tightly close polythene bag. Each day take off either an outer stem or two for cooking, or inner younger stems and young leaves for eating raw. Wash and dry celery before using but not before storage as it more easily develops soft spots when stored wet.

Make Scalloped Celery to go with plain spaghetti, macaroni or brown rice (each can be cooked in same oven heat after bringing to boil on top element). The skim milk, eggs and cheese go well with the wheat or macaroni, or with brown rice, helping to produce a satisfying well flavored meal without meat.

Use your new metric cup and spoon measures for practice. If sticking to the old measures, remember that 250 mL is approximately one cup.

SCALLOPED CELERY

250 mL thinly sliced celery with some leaves
5 mL chopped chives (or onion)
15 mL chopped peanuts
100 mL grated Cheddar cheese
1 mL salt
200 mL wholewheat breadcrumbs
15 mL softened margarine
3 small eggs
200 mL milk from skim powder

Mix first seven ingredients in well greased casserole or shallow baking dish.

Bake in fairly hot oven 190 deg. C for about 30 minutes to brown.

Canned drained whole tomatoes make an attractive color combination with either macaroni or rice. Put your choice of these two in a covered casserole to cook quickly in their own steam in same oven. Serves 4.

Green peppers have high nutrition, too. When you find them at a good price, use them as a main course for supper on the weekend with boiled or baked potatoes and parsley or chive sauce. Again, you don't need meat with this meal; most Canadians consume too much, so why not spend just a few of your present meat dollars on other foods you may have been missing?

Stuffed Green Peppers were favorite no-meat suppers way back in the tough years. Filled with savory mixture, they needed only potatoes to make a nourishing meal.

STUFFED GREEN PEPPERS

3 green peppers
salt
250 mL wholewheat breadcrumbs
50 mL coarsely chopped peanuts
50 mL grated cheese
25 mL soft margarine
10 mL chopped chives
½ mL curry powder
chopped parsley

Wash and cook peppers whole in boiling water until slightly tender. Drain; keep liquid for sauce or gravy.

Slice partially cooked pepper in half crosswise; carefully scrape out seeds; stuff, using remaining ingredients mixed together, except the parsley. Place pepper halves in greased shallow baking dish; bake in moderate oven 177 deg. C about 35 minutes or until fork tender.

Sprinkle with freshly chopped parsley. Serves 6.

Frozen mixed vegetables (peas, corn, green beans and lima beans) in 900 gm bags are a great buy when offered at 79 cents. There is no preparation or waste. Meals in minutes are possible when a bag or two is in the top of refrigerator freezer.

MIXED VEGETABLES (frozen) WITH EGG SAUCE

450 gms (half bag) mixed vegetables (frozen)
Sauce: 15 mL soft margarine
15 mL unbleached flour
1 mL salt
250 mL milk from skim powder
2 hard boiled eggs, sieved
finely chopped parsley or chives
(substitute 125 mL grated cheese if no eggs)

Cook frozen vegetables as advised on package.

Meanwhile, make sauce.

Melt margarine in small pan, stir in flour and salt. Gradually add milk, stirring, for 10 minutes. Add sieved eggs (or cheese) just before serving over cooked vegetables. Sprinkle with parsley. Serves 4.

Yellow turnip, known also as rutabaga and swede, is at its best in winter. It has what I think of as a warm flavor, asking for a touch of curry to bring it out.

CURRIED YELLOW TURNIP with GREEN PEPPER

500 mL diced turnip
125 mL boiling water
1 mL salt
15 mL soft margarine
250 mL slivered green pepper
10 mL chives chopped
5 mL whlolewheat flour
50 mL liquid drained from turnip
1 ml curry powder
25 ml grated Cheddar cheese

Turnip needs peeling now. Dice small and boil until tender.

Meanwhile cook green pepper and chives in margarine for 5 minutes. Thicken with flour, adding turnip liqiid and curry. Cook 5 minutes. Toss in cheese, mix, and serve over hot cooked turnip and hot cooked brown rice. Serves 4.

Plentiful servings of vegetable which still retain many of their natural vitamins are recommended in Canada's Food Guide for twice daily use. Some cooked and some uncooked.

When time is too short to do more than the brief cooking required for most kinds, use creamed soft margarine as a topping in place of sauce. Work in a pinch of a favorite seasoning chives, thyme, ginger, dry mustard, dill, lemon juice, paprika, curry, mint or basil — these are suggestions.

You and your family will find new interest in vegatables as you serve them in new ways that are economical as well as delicious.

60-Minute Gourmet

Fine French Cooking can be Fast

By PIERRE FRANEY

There is a small magazine, edited and published in New York, that is little known to the world at large, but is admired and respected by many chefs.

It is the official publication of the Vatel Club, to which most of the finest French chefs in the U.S. belong, and the editors declare that it is "the only culinary review in the French language published in North America."

I was much amused, in a recent issue, to read about the origins of one of the best and most quickly made veal dishes in the French repertory. The dish is called cotes de veau Foyot, or veal chops in the style of Foyot. The magazine outlines the history of the Cafe Foyot, in its heyday one of the greatest restaurants in Paris. It was still in existence during the siege of Paris in 1870 until, I believe, shortly after the First World War.

The dish is made as follows: You take a fine, pink-textured veal chop and cook it on both sides in butter. It takes only two minutes to a side, if the skillet is heavy enough and the heat is high enough.

You combine fresh bread crumbs with grated parmesan cheese and a portion of butter at room temperature. This mixture is workable, that is to say, it is firm enough to be shaped by hand. You shape the mixture in four flat portions, just large enough to cover each chop, arrange the chops in the skillet containing chopped shallots, and pour in a touch of dry white wine. Then you bake it 10 minutes uncovered and then loosely covered with foil, for about 30 minutes in all.

That's all there is to it. The dish is, to me, a classic example of how great French cooking need not take hours and days of preparation to be brought to simple perfection. Cotes de veau Foyot is a dish suitable for a gathering of your most discriminating friends. It is worthy of a good wine, too, perhaps a fine burgundy of good vintage. An easily made and excellent accompaniment for the dish would be noodles with a quickly, simply and freshly made tomato sauce.

VEAL CHOPS FOYOT

4 veal chops, about ¾ pound each
Salt and freshly-ground pepper to taste
6 tablespoons butter at room temperature
½ cup fresh bread crumbs
½ cup freshly-grated parmesan cheese
2 tablespoons finely chopped shallots
¼ cup dry white wine

1. Preheat the oven to 400 degrees.

2. Sprinkle the chops on both sides with salt and pepper.

3. Heat two tablespoons of butter in a heavy skillet and add the chops. Cook over high heat until golden brown on one side, about two minutes. Turn the chops and cook two minutes longer or until golden brown on the other side. Transfer the chops to a platter and keep warm.

4. Meanwhile, blend the bread crumbs, cheese and remaining four tablespoons butter with the hands, until thoroughly worked together and blended. Divide the mixture into four portions of equal size.

5. Sprinkle the shallots over the bottom of the skillet in which the chops cooked. Return the chops to the skillet.

6. Work the bread crumb mixture into flat sheets to fit the top of each chop. Place on the tops of the chops.

7. Pour the wine around the chops.

8. Place, uncovered, in the oven and bake about 10 minutes until tops are appetizingly brown. Place a layer of foil on top, letting it rest loosely over the veal. Return to the oven and continue baking about 20 minutes.

NOODLES WITH FRESH TOMATO SAUCE

2 tablespoons butter
¼ cup finely chopped onion
1 small clove garlic, finely minced
1 14-ounce can imported tomatoes with tomato paste
1 bay leaf
Salt and freshly-ground pepper to taste
½ pound noodles to medium width.

1. Heat half the butter in a saucepan and add the onion and garlic. Cook, stirring briefly, and add the tomatoes. Add the bay leaf, salt and pepper and cover.

2. Let simmer about 10 minutes. Remove the bay leaf. Swirl in the remaining butter.

3. Cook the noodles to the desired degree of doneness. Drain well and serve hot with the sauce.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: Would you please say something in your column about girls who get involved with married men?

My 23-year-old daughter has entered into such a relationship. The man is handsome, successful and charming, but can offer her nothing but a sleazy after-hours office romance.. (The same old story: his marriage is "empty and loveless" but he can't give up his children.

My daughter is pretty, intelligent and completely devoted to this man. (She works for him.) It hurts me to see her waste her best years in a hopeless relationship.

Since my information about this affair is confidential, I can't approach my daughter with warnings and "motherly" advice.

Perhaps a word from you might help. She reads your column faithfully and believes in you.

DEPENDING ON YOU

DEAR DEPENDING: A "word" from me isn't likely to help much. What your daughter needs is a word from someone who has been down that road and found that it usually leads to heartbreak alley. If she has read me "faithfully," she will have seen many such letters.

An involvement with a married man is painful, degrading and hopeless at best. But some women have to learn the hard way.

DEAR ABBY: Do you think girls who wear glasses come on as sexy as girls who don't? G. IN PERRY

DEAR G.: It depends on their frames.

DEAR ABBY: After many years of marriage my husband began to get careless about his personal hygiene. He'd forget to use a deodorant, or his toothbrush, work hard all day, then join me in bed without showering. He was physically very unattractive.

I didn't nag or scold him. Instead I became the aggressor. I'd slip a cute little poem to him which read something like this:

"Brush your teeth and take a shower
And meet me in the bedroom in half an hour!"

Or, after dinner, I'd lay out his good pajamas and tell him I just HAD to have him, and he'd better hurry up and shower and get to bed before I got out of the mood!

Let me tell you, it worked!

If only women would realize how much more they can accomplish with a little humor and sweet words. Also, men like to be pursued for a change.

My little game has made a big difference in our marriage, Abby. Now sometimes he even writes ME a note. Pass this along.

"TIGER WOMAN" (his name for me)

DEAR ABBY: Like many others, I never thought I would have to write to you, but something so offended my sensitivities that I felt compelled to write for your opinion.

What do you think of a four-year-old child who chews tobacco? His parents think it's cute. The little boy always carries a plug of tobacco and chews and spits just like a little old man.

When I told his parents that it could damage the child's health, they laughed and said, "He doesn't smoke it, so it's not harmful."

Can your experts come up with any facts about the possible dangers of chewing tobacco? Especially to a four-year-old? maybe they will listen to you. A FRIEND

DEAR FRIEND: The American Cancer Society informs me that there is evidence that chewing tobacco can cause cancer of the lips, tongue, mouth or throat. The parents of that child should be hauled into court for child abuse!

Why Diet Beats Stapling

By L. L. Coleman, MD

Years ago, I considered having part of my intestines removed so I could lose some of the 150 extra pounds I carry around with me. I was dissuaded from doing this, however. I'm 46 now and know that if something isn't done soon, I'll never make 50. Recently, I hard about an operation to narrow the stomach, but I have not been able to find out anything more about it. Does this operation sound familiar to you? — Mr. G.W.

DEAR MR. W.: The intestinal by-pass operation flourished for a while and now is slowly fading into obscurity. Such dramatic attempts to reduce the ultra-obese have been found to be somewhat treacherous and even hazardous.

Yet, the whole concept has no been totally abandoned. Dr. William Pace, and a group of his colleagues at the Ohio State University, have developed a new operaton by which they staple off a part of the stomach. This, then, creates a narrow passageway through which relatively little food can pass.

More than 50 patients have had this operation. The average weight loss has been about 15 pounds a month. By stapling the upper part of the stomach and narrowing the opening into the small intestine, the stomach becomes smaller and eating less food seems to satisfy the patient.

This certainly seems to be a radical method for taking off 15 pounds a month. Instead, consider this: With good motivation, a sensible diet under the direction of a doctor, and with some psychotherapeutic support, you can probably lose even more than 15 pounds a month. And the risk of a surgical procedure under a general anesthesia will be avoided.

Have doctors come to any agreement on the use of estrogen hormones to postpone change of life or to make this period more comfortable? — Mrs. N.I.

DEAR MRS. I.: There is no universal agreement among physicians and gynecologists about the advantages and disadvantages of the use of the female sex hormone, estrogen, during pre-menopausal and menopausal phases.

For a time, estrogen therapy was used almost without hestitation, until it was found that there are some distinct disadvantages.

Hormones are very complex substances and are never given indiscriminately. It is for this reason that each woman, in a pre-menopausal period, is individually studied and evaluated before estrogen is advised and used. Once a course of estrogen treatment is started, doctors keep their patients under strict supervision to be certain that side effects do not occur. Under such supervision, any unusual change can readily be identified and the estrogen treatment stopped.

From this it is apparent that your doctor, and only your doctor, can make the decision about the use of estrogen therapy.

Sweet Maple Syrup Flowing in the East

Producers of maple syrup are in the midst of the spring rush. This is the time of the year when the sap is flowing in Eastern Canada maple bushes.

Canada claims almost 70 per cent of the world's production of maple syrup, of which 90 per cent is produced in Quebec and the rest in Ontario and New Brunswick.

Since the sap is at least 96 per cent water, it takes several hours to boil down to the density required for maple syrup (66 per cent sugar). To get the proper density, color and clarity requires great skill on the part of the producer.

The syrup is then filtered and bottled or canned while still hot to prevent mold formation and loss of color and flavor.

Canada No. 1 maple syrup must be uniform in color. The characteristic flavor increases with depth of color. It should have no trace of fermentation or other objectionable odor or taste. market.

Maple syrup flavor enhances baked beans, ham, vegetables (such as carrots, parsnips, squash) pancakes, breakfast cereals, eggnog, baked apples, applesauce, to name only a few. The syrup also enhances coffee.

Celebrate spring with this "Quebec coffee" recipe tested by the food consultants of Food Advisory Division. A non-alcoholic version using brandy extract is also included. It's our Canadian "Irish coffee", made with our very own Canadian sweet, maple syrup.

QUEBEC COFFEE

250 ml whipping cream
15 ml maple syrup
Lemon wedge
Sugar
90 ml maple syrup
150 ml brandy
1 l hot strong coffee

Whip cream, gradually adding 15 ml maple syrup. Warm six 250 ml mugs by rinsing in very hot water. Rub cut edge of lemon around the rim of each mug; dip in dish of sugar so sugar clings to the rim.

In each mug, place 15 ml maple syrup and 25 ml brandy, then add 150 ml coffee and stir. Top with dollop (about 50 ml) whipped cream. 6 servings

BRANDY EXTRACT VARIATION: Combine 10 ml brandy extract and 300 ml water. Use 50 ml brandy extrat mixture in place of 25 ml brandy.

Make Snacks Creative

Snacks need not be a problem. In creative hands, they can be a solution, say food consultants at Agriculture Canada.

They should be chosen carefully, considering both nutrient content and dental health.

Mild-flavored, colorful finger foods are ideal. Stock up on fruit and raw vegetables, unsweetened juices, cheese, yogurt, peanut butter, plain muffins, nuts and seeds, granola, whole grain or enriched bread and crackers.

A Main Course for Passover

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mae Shafter Rockland's orange-baked chicken is a light main course for Passover Seder suppers. It is adapted from The Jewish Party Book, (Schocken $14.95), a contemporary guide to customs, crafts and foods for many different occasions.

2 (2 ½-pound) frying chickens, cut up, or 8 chicken breasts or 8 chicken legs
2 teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon black pepper
One-third cup flour
½ cup salad oil
2 teaspoons celery seeds
2 large onions, peeled and thinly sliced
1 ½ cups orange juice
2 unpeeled juice oranges, sliced and seeded
2 (8-ounce) cans mandarin orange segments or 4 navel oranges, peeled and sliced

Wash and dry chicken parts. Combine salt, pepper, and flour in a small paper bag. Shake chicken in the bag, a few pieces at a time, to coat them evenly. Heat salad oil in a large frying pan; add chicken, skin side down, in a single layer; sprinkle with celery seeds. Over low heat cook chicken on both sides until golden brown. Place the chicken parts, skin side up, in a 2-quart covered casserole. Pour excess fat from the skillet, add onions and cook, stirring occasionally, until they are soft. Add orange juice and heat to boiling point, stirring to loosen crusty particles from the pan. Pour this over the chicken, lifting the parts to let some juice and onions underneath. Cover with the juice, orange slices and the casserole lid. Bake 1 hour, or until tender, in 350-degree F oven. Before serving, replace the cooked orange slices with the mandarin segments or navel orange slices. Serves 6.

CORONADO CASSEROLE

Serve with: Sliced Tomatoes on Salad Greens ● Crescent Rolls ● Baked Apples

2 pounds zucchini, sliced
1 pound lean ground beef
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon each pepper and garlic powder
1 cup finely chopped onions
3 cups cooked rice
1 can (4 ounces) green chiles, chopped
2 eggs, beaten
1½ cups cottage cheese
2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
2 cups grated Cheddar cheese

Cook zucchini in salted water about 5 minutes. Drain thoroughly and set aside. Saute meat, seasonings, and onions until meat is no longer pink and onions are tender crisp. Add rice, green chiles and zucchini. Blend eggs, cottage cheese, and Parmesan cheese. Stir into meat mixture. Turn into two greased shallow 2-quart casseroles. Top each with 1 cup Cheddar cheese. Bake one at 350° for 30 minutes. Wrap and freeze the other for later use.

Each casserole makes 6 servings. Calories per serving: 250.

Not for Cakes

No Food Too Good For Our Boys

MONTREAL (CP) — Ice cream isn't on the menu but spaghetti, chicken stew with dumplings, ham, swiss steak, chili, spanish rice, smoked herring, pineapple, cookies, and crunchy cereal are.

And all these dishes along with niceties such as moist towelettes, matches and can-openers are conveniently prepared to fit into 4½-pound individual ration packs, enough for three main meals, snacks and liquids for a day.

This is a far cry from the field rations carried by the Canadian forces during the Second World War. A 1939 navy manual listed the rations to keep each member of a landing party self-supporting for 24 hours: one pound preserved meat, ⅝ ounces tea, two ounces sugar, one pound biscuit, one ounce chocolate and three ounces cheese.

"If sufficient notice of the time of landing can be given, pasties or sandwiches may be made by the cooks and substituted for meat and biscuit ration," the manual continued.

Even today's fancier rations may not be the ultimate gourmet experience, but after a morning's hike through the bush in below zero weather, carrying 18-pound packs, snow shoes and rifles and dragging supplies on a large sled, hot food and a rest were welcome for the approximately 100 men taking part in a recent field exercise.

They dug a deep pit in the snow, built a fire and huddled around it while waiting for their cans to heat up. And one group managed to nab a hare to supplement the rations.

"Almost as good as home cooking," said Pierre Daoust of Valleyfield, Que., as he polished off some chicken stew.

Norbert Legace from Campbellton, N.B., agreed: "The food's OK. There's lots of choice."

Field rations are being improved even more. New individual meal packs are being tested by infantry and armored units here and abroad and are to be in full use in all branches of the service by 1982.

Each meal of the new vacuum-packed and freeze-dried foods will be in a separate waterproof foil pack. The present rations are packed in one-day containers and after the first meal, soldiers must repack food they are saving for later in the day.

The new rations will include roast beef, pork, green beans, scrambled eggs, tubes of spreads and jams, packets of beverage mix, granola bars, candy bars, matches, gum, and towelettes.

"The soldier gets the best food available," says Major Paul Sharpe of Mobile Command Headquarters, St. Hubert, Que., who is in charge of food service for Canada's land forces.

Back at the base, about 75 per cent of the food served is fresh.

"We feel we can give the soldier a better deal using fresh rather than frozen or canned food," says Sharpe.

He adds the major change in food service since the Second World War has been the growing expertise of the cooks. Many are members of a chefs' association and have participated in a food show in Montreal.

Herb Growing 'n Bluegrass Music

By ROBERT LEVEY

FULTON, Md. (WP) — The sores on Jim Duke's shins were raw and open, and as their owner put it, in his lush Alabama accent, "They been itchin' like a son of a gun." Duke clearly had a fairly serious case of psoriasis. But he also had a special way to treat it.

On the dining room table sat a box, postmarked Florida, courtesy of a friend. In the box sat an aloe frond, the "leaf" of a plant that is said to have soothing effects on skin rashes and infections.

Jim Duke cut the sword-shaped frond open and rubbed some aloe slime on his sores. Almost immediately, he said, they felt better.

"I don't claim this is a cure," Duke said, "and I'm not sure I'd want my daughter to try this. But it could be just as effective as what the drug companies have on the market. All I'm saying is, let's not leave any stones unturned in research."

Don't worry about Jim Duke doing that. He is paid to make sure the stones are turned.

Since May, Duke, a 49-year-old Ph.D. in botany, has headed the Medicinal Plant Resources Laboratory at the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Beltsville, Md., research station. That is a fancy-pants way of saying that Duke is the federal government's chief herb tester — when he isn't relaxing by playing bass with a bluegrass band called the Howard County Dump.

For Duke, herbs are far more than something to hack apart in a lab. Duke, his wife, Peggy, and their two children live on a six-acre farm here named Herbal Vineyard. Much of it is given over to more than 200 species of plants. If you called Jim Duke and his family "herb freaks" — as People magazine once did — "well, we wouldn't mind a bit," Duke says.

That does not mean the Dukes are growing exotic plants that will get you higher than a kite if you chew or smoke them. In fact, most of Duke's garden contains nothing more exotic than salad geeens or spices — although most are too rare to be found in supermarkets.

Duke himself says he much prefers "redneck wine" to any other means of getting high. Indeed, he grows 60 varieties of grapes on his spread — and they aren't for jelly. If marijuana or anything zippier is growing on the Duke property, "I sure as hell didn't put it there," says the proprietor.

But Duke has planted spiny ginseng root, foeniculum, rainbow fern and yellow ladyslipper, just to drop a name or two. And he planted them all, as well as their brothers and sisters, for his own amusement.

Duke's herbs are to fondle, spindle and mutilate. They are there to be traded, reproduced and fretted over. Occasionally, they serve as sources for herbal medicines. Above all, they give the Duke farm a color (green) and smell (vaguely fruity) that sets it far apart from its horsey neighbors.

Commercial forces occasionally take hold on the Duke spread — or at least they have tried to. In the spring and summer, the Duke children — John, 17, and Cissy, 13 — take some of the family crops to the nearby farmer's market in Columbia. On a good day, they have been known to clear all of $12.

But if Herbal Vineyard was ever supposed to be self-supporting, the Dukes would have been selling insurance long ago.

"We're the type to whom the last Agricultural Yearbook was dedicated. We're people who make our living elsewhere," says Duke. "All propositions are losing as far as money is concerned. It's a hobby. I'm the major laborer. If I see a new herb, I'll usually try to get it."

A large part of Jim Duke's work for the USDA consists of collecting "new" herbs. He has traveled all over the world on collecting tours (Panama in February, China last summer). This year, he is heading up a special collection of herbs that will be tested by the National Cancer Institute as possible cures for cancer.

"We've already been through 10 per cent of the plants in the world. One in 10 has some effect on cancer in the test tube," Duke said. But the excitement lies in the "hundreds of plants that have never been tested." At Beltsville, Duke says wryly, "We're not worried about unemployment."

Duke is concerned, however, with the public attitude toward herbal medicines.

He and his colleagues jokingly call the Beltsville lab "Ye Olde Quacky Shacky," because they know that's how many people view them and their work. And Duke is forever being urged by someone or other to "come out of the closet" and declare that herb medicines are great and patent medicines awful.

In fact, Duke is ambivalent about which, if either, is better.

"You get some strong advocates of herbal medicine, but you seldom get scientific proof," Duke said. "A lot of it is really dangerous. You can overdose.

"On the other hand, there are more people hit by falling airplanes than are poisoned by herbal medicine. I'd say more than 10 per cent of the old wives' tales have some truth to them."

Duke grows his own herbs at home

YOUR INDIVIDUAL RIGHTS VERSUS GOVERNMENT CONTROL... THAT'S THE ISSUE IN THIS PROVINCIAL ELECTION.

British Columbia is entering a major period of growth and development...and the coming provincial election will determine whether the people of our province truly share in the benefits of that development.

The issue is simple. On the one hand are the policies of the Social Credit government, led by Bill Bennett—a government that stands for individual rights and individual initiative. On the other hand are the policies of the New Democratic Party...policies which favor increased government control.

Let's take an obvious example: the free shares offered to every British Columbian in the B.C. Resources Investment Corporation. Our idea is to allow the growth of a strong and independent development corporation... a corporation owned not by powerful interests or by government, but by many thousands of individual British Columbians. The process is happening right now, as people throughout B.C. apply for their free shares and purchase additional shares. What they are doing is to ensure for themselves and their families a real stake in our resource development.

The NDP would change all that. When the share plan was introduced, Dave Barrett stated that he would cancel the offer if he became Premier. He doesn't believe in individual ownership...and neither does the party he represents. They favor government control. The NDP has shown the same attitude in the debate over oil and gas exploration rights in northeastern B.C.—they would turn over to Ottawa the rights to this resource. Your Social Credit government claims that British Columbians should have the right to develop this resource, and to benefit from this development. That's why oil and gas rights held by the province have been included in the holdings of B.C. Resources... becoming part of the assets held by thousands of individual citizens throughout B.C.

Your Social Credit government favors individual ownership on a much more personal level, too. We believe individuals should have the right to own their own land and their own home. That's why we offer special grants to encourage home ownership and to reduce property taxes. We don't believe, as the NDP does, that land should be controlled by the state...and that individuals should become tenants of the state. We want you to be a real owner in B.C.—not a tenant. We want you to own a home...to own a share of our resources... to have a real stake in the future of this great province of ours.

We pledge a continued effort to provide the programs people in this province need. Many of those programs have already been introduced by this government...programs like long-term health care, universal pharmacare, increased aid for senior citizens and for the handicapped. Other benefits have been announced in our new budget...benefits including a reduced provincial sales tax, lower personal income tax and increased home-owner grant.

But none of these programs or benefits will ever be at the expense of your rights as an individual citizen. Tangible proof of that pledge is the provincial Bill of Rights announced in the recent Throne Speech—a document which will for the first time define by law the inalienable rights of the individual British Columbian.

Join with us in building a province where the rights of the individual will always come first...where government works not to make itself more powerful, but to serve the needs of the individual. In return for that support, we pledge the unfailing efforts of this government to ensure a secure future and a better life for all British Columbians.

SOCIAL CREDIT WORKS. FOR YOU.

For a Fee, They Arrange Ransoms

By LARRY KRAMER
The Washington Post

LONDON — When Gustavo Curtis, 54-year-old vice president in charge of Beatrice Foods Co.'s subsidiary in Colombia, was kidnapped from his white, chauffer-driven Dodge on a Bogota sidestreet on Sept. 28, 1976, several events followed in short order:

—A hurried telephone call was placed from Beatrice's Chicago headquarters to an obscure six-story white stone building in downtown London.

—A little-known subsidiary of a British insurance company answered its phone and immediately dispatched a four-man team of highly specialized counter-terrorist experts to Bogota.

—After arriving in Bogota, the team secretly took over all dealings with the kidnappers while at the same time searching for the victim.

—The kidnappers demanded $5 million for Curtis' freedom.

—Intense negotiations began between the kidnappers and the British team.

—After eight months of haggling over price, Curtis was freed.

While this drama was being acted out, Curtis was left bound and gagged in a "hollowed-out cave 60 feet underground" for eight months, while an organization he had never heard of negotiated his ransom price down from $5 million to about $450,000 — and finally paid off.

When he was freed, Curtis was weak, emaciated and rather upset. Upset enough, in fact, to file a $185 million lawsuit in U.S. District Court in New York against Beatrice for allegedly doing nothing to free him for eight months. The company even had been aware of terrorist threats against him several months before his abduction, Curtis claims in his suit, which is still pending. He says Beatrice told him at the time of the threats not to worry, that measures were being taken to protect him.

But Curtis' suit also has shed some light on the existence of a four-year-old, super-secret, para-military organization called Control Risks Ltd. A subsidiary of the Hogg Robinson Group, a British insurance consortium, it is described in Hogg Robinson's annual report for 1977 as a security company whose "kidnap prevention and ransom service is now being used by Lloyd's (of London) underwriters as well as by many international companies both within the United Kingdom and around the world." What Hogg Robinson does not say is that if you purchase kidnap insurance, you get Control Risks as part of the deal — like it or not.

And if an executive is kidnapped, Control Risks takes over everything, from efforts to find the victim to ransom negotiations. And whatever Control Risks says, goes. While Control Risks Ltd. officials would not talk to The Washington Post on the record, several sources connected with the company both directly and otherwise agreed to be interviewed off the record, and were able to describe the workings of a growing, yet mysterious business.

In fact, the terrorism-kidnap prevention insurance business, which began at Lloyds after the Lindbergh kidnapping in 1932 and blossomed after the Peugeot kidnapping in Paris some 20 years ago, now generates $50 million to $60 million in annual premiums, according to sources at Lloyds, whose underwriters handle virtually all such business placed by brokers such as Hogg Robinson.

It is difficult to come up with a more exact figure on such business because one of the conditions a company must adhere to when it buys kidnap insurance for its executives is an agreement not to tell anyone that it has the policy. "We don't want terrorists to know who is insured for obvious reasons," a source involved in the business says. "Wouldn't you go after someone who is insured? It's a guaranteed payoff." All kidnap policy slips are kept out of public view in a locked safe at Lloyds.

Insurers at Lloyds say the contract that is signed for kidnap insurance is "air-tight. It mandates that the firm operate always within the law, co-operate with the police, and that nothing must happen to encourage this kind of crime."

Estimated costs for kidnap policies range from $30,000 to $150,000 a year. One huge multinational corporation is said to be paying $400,000 a year for comprehensive worldwide coverage.

And for its own insurance, Lloyds has Control Risks.

Many countries have laws forbidding kidnap insurance, while others forbid ransom payments because they fear such payments encourage more kidnappings.

In the Curtis case, however, Control Risks decided to pay the $450,000 to kidnappers in Colombia despite the local law banning such payments. For that effort, two Control Risks' operatives found themselves in South American jails for six weeks.

The two British negotiators, both former British Army majors with the elite Special Air Service, returned to England only after jumping bail and skipping their trial in Colombia.

In all, Control Risks Ltd. employs 10 men working out of offices in London, Washington and Beirut.

At least two employees are former British Intelligence agents, and four of the 10 make up a flying strike force ready to move at a moment's notice to any part of the world.

The British Army has developed many of the world's top anti-terrorist experts during its long struggle in Northern Ireland, and thus has been a fertile training ground for many Control Risks operatives.

And for the most part, the training has paid off. Control Risks claims to have saved its clients an estimated $10 million annually in ransom demands, while at the same time not further endangering the lives of the kidnapped executives.

Terrorist activity is, if anything, on the rise. According to the most reliable figures available, acts of terrorism around the world against American businesses jumped from 250 in 1976 to 400 last year.

"Kidnap is now a universal problem of epidemic proportions," wrote David Walker, managing director of Control Risks Ltd., in a recent issue of Risk Management magazine. "Terrorists in Argentina are believed to be operating with a fund of around $240 million that they accumulated largely from ransom payments."

Further, Walker said, "Kidnap is a uniquely efficient means of separating a rich man or a corporation from their assets. There is a large element of drama and excitement in this form of crime which appeals to the media and guarantees the extensive press and television coverage the politically motivated terrorist seeks."

Walker recommended kidnap insurance for several reasons, not the least of which is that "the underwriter's representatives, with their experience in coercive bargaining, are likely to achieve a lower ransom settlement than would be made by a distraught family or bewildered corporation."

"It is important to remember that the kidnappers do not hold all advantages during negotiations," he added. "Their power stems from their total control over the destiny of their victim, but it only exists as long as they do not exercise it."

Korea $B Order For Jumbo Jets

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Boeing Co. and Korean Air Lines announced Tuesday the signing of a $1.3-billion contract for Boeing 747 jumbo jets.

The agreement calls for delivery of 10 of the big jets from 1980 through 1982, with options on another eight in 1983 and 1984.

Rusty Roedman, Boeing's director of international sales, told a news conference the deal is the largest with a foreign country by a U.S. aircraft manufacturer, topping Boeing's $900-million agreement with Singapore Airlines last October.

Korea Air Lines will pay $660 million for the first 10 planes, including spare parts. The purchase includes four 747F freighters, three 747-100B passenger models and three 747-200B long-range passenger craft.

The option agreement will total $640 million and will include two freighters, four 200Bs and two models not yet specified.

Korea Air Lines now has a fleet of 40 aircraft, including eight 747s.

Scott's World

By VERNON SCOTT
United Press International

HOLLYWOOD — The ripoff has become as much a part of American lifestyle as blue jeans and the sales tax; it goes with the territory.

Short weights, mislabeling, inferior materials, shoddy workmanship and hidden costs are more or less shrugged off by victims who figure they can't beat the system, much less city hall.

His Consumers Buyline TV show is syndicated in some 44 U.S. cities.

A former newsman who still thinks of himself as a reporter rather than a consumer advocate, Horowitz is a brash and tireless foe of the shady operator and the incompetent workman.

On his show, surrounded by sympathetic consumers, Horowitz blasts away at inferior products, misleading labels and fraudulent guarantees.

Horowitz receives 2,500 letters a week from viewers who think they have been duped, suckered or slickered one way or another. They look to the dapper ombudsman to wreak revenge or at least expose the calumny of the ripoff artists.

Unlike some consumer champions who declare all businessmen crooked and all their customers as innocent foils, Horowitz is a laid-back dude who seeks only the facts and makes an honest attempt to be impartial. A lot of the time, he says, it's the consumer who is trying to rip off the manufacturer.

For the most part, however, he is the champion of the underdog who gets finagled. He runs his own comparative tests on products, making sure of the results before lambasting them on his show.

The most offending product in the U.S. economy, according to Horowitz, is the automobile, domestic or imported. More millions of dollars are ripped off consumers by auto dealers, body shops and mechanics than by any others.

"Cars present the worst problems for consumers because most of us are dummies on the subject," Horowitz said. "We believe any guy with grease on his hands holding a rag is an expert.

"It's crazy for us to put that much faith in a guy in greasy overalls. Would you put your life in the hands of a doctor just because he had blood all over his operating outfit?

"A lot of movie and TV stars call me to say how they've been ripped off and asking me for advice. Celebrities, because everyone thinks they're rich, get ripped off more than other people."

Next to automobiles, Horowitz says, mail order houses, insurance companies, swimming pool builders, restaurants, charities and major appliances are the source of the greatest ripoffs.

"Most of us are ripped off because we're ignorant," he said. "And we don't do anything about it because were pushed around, intimidated and embarrassed. We also don't take enough time to investigate a product before buying it.

"One of the great ripoffs today are diesel cars which are selling for $2,000 over sticker prices because people want to beat the gas shortage."

Horowitz, despite his lack of evangelistic fervor, has become a folk hero to some viewers, a guru of the consumer cult. He dislikes the term "consumerism" because it sounds dull.

In restaurants, airports and other public places he is assailed by people with complaints about hundreds of different products. Once in a while a stranger will approach him to endorse a product.

When he shops in a super market, women rummage through his shopping cart examining the labels, figuring Horowitz knows good products from bad.

"Everybody has a complaint," Horowitz said. "I probably get ripped off more than most people. Ripoff artists think I'm just a TV personality and not alert to shoddy products or shady operations.

"I came into this line of work because it became a way of life with me. I've always been out there trying to defend myself against being ripped off.

"Virtually billions of dollars are ripped off consumers in this country every year. The public is finally getting angry and resentful about it, probably because inflation is eating up so much of their paychecks.

"But there is a right way and a wrong way to go about righting consumer wrongs."

Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission

Public Announcement

Ottawa, March 30, 1979

CABLE TELEVISION SERVICE TO SOME OF THE METROPOLITAN MONTREAL MUNICIPALITIES AND SURROUNDING AREAS

The Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission, on March 28, 1979 issued a Public Announcement giving notice that it has received an application for a licence for a cable television broadcasting undertaking to serve Beauharnois, Melocheville, Saint-Remi, Saint-Jacques, L'Epiphanie, L'Assomption, Saint-Sulpice, Lavaltrie, Saint-Paul l'Ermite, Repentigny, Charlemagne, Vercheres, Contrecoeur, Laurentides, Blainville, Saint-Janvier et Sainte-Annedes-Plaines, Quebec and their surrounding area.

Other persons wishing to submit a similar application for one or more of these locations and/or of these surrounding municipalities, are required to state formally their intention to do so, to the Commission, on or before April 30, 1979.

Copies of the complete text of this Public Announcement are available at the CRTC office, Central Building, Les Terrasses de la Chaudiere, 1, Promenade du Portage, Hull, Quebec, the Western Regional office, Suite 1130, 701 West Georgia Street, Vancouver, British Columbia, the Montreal Regional office, Suite 2114, 800 Victoria Place, Montreal, Quebec and the Atlantic Regional office, Room 428, Barrington Tower, 1894 Barrington Street, Scotia Square, Halifax, Nova Scotia.

Public Announcement

Ottawa, March 30, 1979

The CRTC issued two Public Announcements on March 26, 1979 that reflect the evolution of Commission policy with regard to the regulation and supervision of cable television.

In a 37-page Public Announcement, the Commission reviewed certain aspects of regulation and policy concerning cable television programming services particularly as they relate to:

—Simultaneous Program Substitution
—Carriage of U.S. TV Stations
—Cable Carriage of Distant Canadian Stations
—The Community Channel
—Carriage of FM Stations
—Closed Circuit Audio
—Audio Signals on Video Channels
—Advertising on Cable Television System
—Special Programming Channels

In a companion Public Announcement and Decision, the Commission addresses the cable carriage of non-programming services. In its decision, the Commission approves, on an experimental basis, for a period of two years, applications by Ottawa Cablevision Limited, (Ottawa region), Grand River Cable TV, (Kitchener region) and London Cable TV (London region) for the distribution of new communications services, such as burglar, fire and medical alarm and consumer information retrieval. Such distribution is approved subject to the conditions:

(1) that the licensees ensure the priority carriage of off-air and locally originated programming services;

(2) that subscribers who do not choose to receive these new communications services are not charged for them, directly or indirectly, and

(3) that no advertising material is carried on these channels.

Copies of the complete text of these Public Announcements are available at the CRTC office, Central Building, Les Terrasses de la Chaudiere, 1, Promenade du Portage, Hull, Quebec, the Western Regional office, Suite 1130, 701 West Georgia Street, Vancouver, British Columbia, the Montreal Regional office, Suite 2114, 800 Victoria Place, Montreal, Quebec, and the Atlantic Regional office, Room 428, Barrington Tower, 1894 Barrington Street, Scotia Square, Halifax, Nova Scotia.

Linda Changes Plans

NAIROBI (UPI) — Rock star Linda Ronstadt, whose idea of a vacation obviously differs from that of her companion, California Gov. Jerry Brown, today cancelled plans to visit a game preserve by herself and instead left with Brown for northern Kenya.

Miss Ronstadt has appeared depressed since arriving Monday, reportedly upset at the hordes of photographers who have dogged her every step in Kenya.

Dressed in a bright yellow T-shirt and rolled up blue jeans, Miss Ronstadt took off with the governor in a light plane for the town of Marsabit to visit a irrigation plant.

"These are two strong willed people who like to do their own thing," an aide said before Ronstadt changed her plans. "There is nothing unusual in today's program."

The couple came to Kenya to celebrate Brown's 41st birthday last Saturday and to enjoy an Easter holiday watching some of the world's last great herds of wildlife.

No Soviet Jobless, Just Parasites

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union claims to have no unemployment, but it has another kind of problem — parasites, able-bodied people who won't work.

Some are lazy ne'er-do-wells, others are dropouts from socialist society while a few are out just to beat the system. What they all have in common is their refusal to perform any useful kind of work.

They are a well-known scandal here, openly denounced by the official press in hopes of scaring away others who might follow their lead. The non-workers leave themselves open to charges of parasitism, or living off the state, punishable by exile.

Take, for example, the case of 27-year-old Slava, whose life was chronicled by the Communist party newspaper Pravda in a recent article headlined The Loafer.

In two years, Slava has worked only two weeks, it said.

Once an active student who even organized a lecture at his Crimean village's House of Culture on the subject Work is the Cause of Pride, Slava now sits around the house all day "either watching television, leafing through books or going to the beach on sunny days," the article said.

While Slava is idle, his mother and 68-year-old grandmother work in the fields of the local tobacco farm, and give most of their sizable salary to him, *Pravda*said.

Even after he married, Slava refused a profession in his chosen field of eletromechanics and lived off his wife's earnings, the paper added.

To earn a few rubles here and there, he takes on private jobs such as digging a well or raising a fence for neighbors.

Yet in all other respects, Slava is a model citizen — he doesn't drink, is not a hooligan, presents a "neat and polite appearance."

Soviet officialdom, however, is baffled to explain why such loafers exist.

The word "unemployment" is never used here by Soviet writers, who prefer the euphemism, "being unoccupied." According to the teachings of Marxism-Leninism, unemployment exists only in capitalist countries and is not a problem under "mature socialism."

Yet, unofficial estimates are that as many as 20 per cent of the Soviet Union's workers are not engaged in productive work.

Article 60 of the Soviet constitution specifically states:

"It is the duty and a matter of honor for every able-bodied citizen of the U.S.S.R. to work conscientiously in his chosen, socially useful occupation and strictly to observe labor discipline.

"Evasion of socially useful work is incompatible with the principles of socialist society."

In a recent speech, even President Leonid Brezhnev acknowledged the country's problem with unemployables and claimed that the Soviet people demand stricter punishment for loafers.

Yet the mere failure to work is not specifically prohibited by Soviet law, legal scholars here point out.

If it can be proved that a citizen has purposely avoided socially useful work, or committed other anti-social acts which enable him to lead a parasitic way of life, then he may be tried in court under an edict of the Supreme Soviet passed on May 4, 1961.

If convicted, the parasite can be ordered to resettle in a specially designated remote area of the country for two to five years.

Getting the Jump on Metrics

By LAWRENCE FIENBERG

WASHINGTON (WP) — Malcolm E. O'Hagan, the executive director of the U.S. Metric Board, drove to the Washington Monument grounds one sunny morning last month with two members of his staff and three frogs.

While photographers recorded the scene, the frogs jumped and O'Hagan cheered them on — all in the cause of converting the United States from its traditional measure of inches, pounds, and pints to the metres, grams, and litres of the metric system.

"Kilo Monster," the frog who jumped the farthest here, will be shipped to California in mid-May, a spokesman for the Metric Board said, to take part in the annual frog jumping contest at the Calaveras County Fair.

For the first time in 51 years, he said, the results of the Calaveras frog jump will be reported in centimetres as well as inches.

"The Metric board called us up," said Raymond Callahan, the manager of the Calaveras Fair, "and asked us to use centimetres, too. We didn't have any objections. So we said we'll do it."

Getting other American institutions to adopt metric measures has not been so easy.

During the past two years there have been some important landmarks on the march to the metric system. Radio stations and bank clocks have started reporting temperatures in Celsius degrees as well as the familiar Fahrenheit. Domestic wine producers have replaced quart bottles with litres. Automobile manufacturers have brought out new models with metric dimensions.

But in the face of public opposition, there have also been serious setbacks:

—The Federal Highway Administration scuttled a plan to switch all the nation's speed limit signs from miles per hour to kilometres.

—The National Weather Service withdrew indefinitely its plan to give forecasts and measurements in metric units.

—The Department of Agriculture dropped a proposal to label all fish and poultry products in metrics.

Even though Congress passed a "metric conversion act" in late 1975, which established the Metric Board, it is still a debatable question whether the act made it government policy to encourage metric use.

The General Accounting Office, the Congressional watchdog agency, last October issued a long report, declaring that "national policy is not to prefer one system (of measurement) over the other. The report said any switch to metric system would be costly and have only a slight effect on foreign trade, even though all other major countries now use metric measures.

The report said the Metric Board sould remain neutral and only help private groups that want to go metric, anyway.

The board's chairman Louis K. Polk, a retired vice-president of the Bendix Corp., said the board should not be so "passive."

"We have no mandatory powers," Polk said, 'but we do have a mandate to plan for a voluntary conversion to a predominantly metric society . . . Why would we have a law if we weren't supposed to do anything at all?"

At a meeting here the 17-member board voted to hold hearings soon on whether it should recommend that gasoline be sold in litres instead of gallons.

Polk said the issue came up because the price of gas is nearing a $1 a gallon, the most that can be registered on the nation's 1.5 million gas pumps.

Because of the difference in size, gas that costs $1 a gallon would be just 26 cents a litre.

Polk said switching to litres would save $150 for each gas pump involved rather than a resetting the gears to register over $1 a gallon.

Incredible Life and Death of Skippy's Creator

By ROB LEVEY

Joan Crosby Tibbetts kept digging

WASHINGTON (WP) — He never had Charlie Brown's wryness, or Superman's suaveness. For dumpiness, Dagwood Bumstead had him dead to rights. For dopiness, he never came close to Beetle Bailey.

But Skippy was as popular as all of them combined. Maybe more. Arguably, he was one the most pouplar comic strip character ever to come along.

Skippy was a little pen-and-ink boy with a floppy hat, short pants, falling-down socks and a knack for getting into heart-warming kinds of trouble. For 20 years, through the Depression and the Second World War, Skippy was the featured character of his creator, Percy Crosby. Then, on Dec. 8, 1945, without warning, Skippy disappeared from North American newspapers.

A lot of people wondered where he had gone, and why. Many pleaded for his return. Entrepreneurs tried briefly and unsuccessfully to resurrect Skippy.

But Percy Crosby had interred Skippy — and was midway in the long process of interring himself.

Financially rocky, alcoholically overboard, furiously and publicly anti-Roosevelt from the time FDR moved to the White House, Percy Crosby "must have been a deeply unhappy man" in 1945, says his daughter, Joan Crosby Tibbetts. "I'm sure he thought he was a lousy failure, even though he was gifted, world-famous."

In 1948, Percy Crosby attempted suicide in his New York apartment by slashing his wrists. A short time later, he was confined to the mental ward of a veterans' hospital on Long Island. He spent 16 years there, until he died of stomach cancer in 1964, on his 73rd birthday.

Crosby had five children by the first two of his three marriages. But from the time he divorced his second wife, none of the children was allowed to know his whereabouts, or even to discuss him. In the late 1950s, according to Tibbets, the children, by then all adults, were told he had died. None, as it turned out, ever saw their father again.

But Joan Tibbetts, now 46, remembers "asking questions. We just kept asking questions." At 15, she "swore that, when I grow up, I'm going to write a book about my father." As a collge student, she did my "damnedest to find him, or find out about him. I missed him very, very much.

"There is a chocolate and vanilla side of everybody," says Tibbetts, who lives in Reston, Va. "I wanted to see my chocolate side."

It began to reveal itself a week after her father died. Tibbetts was then living in Pleasantville, N.Y. Her husband called her from his New York office one morning to tell her that her long puzzlement was over. Her father's obituary was in that morning's New York Times.

The only Crosby child then living in the New York area, Tibbetts went to Kings Park, the hospital where her father had been confined. She retrieved his personal effects and much of his work, which included hundreds of paintings and thousands of cartoons.

In the 15 years since, Tibbetts has been "obsessed, yes, I guess you could say obsessed" with rehabilitating her father's reputation and resurrecting Skippy.

Doctors who treated Percy Crosby at Kings Park have assured her that "he was not insane," Tibbetts says. "He kept telling everyne he was famous, and they thought he was hallucinating. My father's sin was that he was vitriolic and vocal. The only way to shut him up was to put him away."

The volume and venom of Percy Crosby's voice was first displayed publicly in 1933, at the height of his career.

Crosby was deeply disturbed by Roosevelt's New Deal. He thought it signalled the encroachment of socialism into the democratic traditions. But the rather innocent, nonpolitical Skippy comic strip was not the place to protest. So Crosby bought full-page ads in major newspapers, most of which carried his cartoons, to denounce the president.

"Sure, he was naive," his daughter says. "If you like your bread and butter, you don't do that kind of thing."

Always a difficult man to live with because of his temper, Crosby flew into a rage at his second wife in 1939 and stalked off to Florida for two weeks. When he returned, Agnes Dale Crosby had filed for divorce.

The family was then living on the Ballantrae Estate in McLean, Va., just down the road from where Ethel Kennedy and her family live today. The Crosbys also owned 1,400 acres in Loudoun County, Va.

According to newspaper reports, a Fairfax County Circuit Court judge ordered all the land handed over to Agnes Dale Crosby and set alimony at the then-astronomical level of $14,500 a year. He also denied Percy Crosby visiting rights and ordered him not to interfere or communicate in any way with his former wife and their four children, Skippy, Barbara, Joan and Carol.

"The divorce crushed my father," Tibbetts said. As evidence, she has copies of dozens of letters he wrote during his years at Kings Park — to his two sisters, to his friends, to former business associates. Almost everyone mentions his sorrow at the end of the marriage and his wish to see his children.

But "mental patients aren't taken seriously," Tibbets says. After a while, "I think my father felt he wasn't ever going to get out. I think he just gave up."

Joan Tibbetts has done anything but. She never wrote her book, although she made available her collection of her father's works and papers to another author, cartoonist Jerry Robinson, whose book, "Skippy and Percy Crosby," was published last year. And she has persevered in other ways. In recent years, her work has begun to pay off.

Recently, Skippy Inc., the corporation her father founded and which she now owns, won a violation of trademark settlement against the peanut butter manufacturer of the same name.

In the last year, all of Percy Crosby's original Skippy copyrights have been renewed. And in 1979, Tibbetts hopes to sign contracts for a Skippy television show, Skippy dolls, Skippy soft drinks, Skippy whatevers.

Tibbetts' mother, Agnes Dale Crosby, and Tibbets' two sisters and brother apparently have no objection to the projects, although they have not actively helped in the work. The family has not been able to locate Crosby's daughter by his first marriage.

"The family might as well make the money," Tibetts argues. "If we don't protect our rights, someone else will just use the name for free."

Robert Redford: Activist Disguised as Actor

By LYNN DARLING

WASHINGTON (WP) — He tells a story that paints the paradox.

It was a bankers' meeting in Utah, some years ago. "I didn't know anything about banking," he says. "They just wanted Robert Redford. And I got up to make some sort of standard speech — until I looked out at this sea of faces and thought about all the complacency out there and all the money that could be put to good use. So I started haranguing them about what they should be doing with it. I really let them have it."

And after it was all over, he braced himself for a barrage of hostile questions. Finally, the first question came.

"The guy got up and said, 'Did you really jump off that cliff in Butch Cassidy, or was that a stand-in?'"

He is not, of course, the first of his constellation to find his activism trapped by his public persona.

Film stars from Charlie Chaplin to Jane Fonda have been ridiculed for the causes they supported and even John Wayne once growled about getting "bad criticism of my pictures because of critics trying to criticize my political inclinations instead of my pictures. Jesus!"

Robert Redford is 42. He's already carved his cliche. He has charged his roles with roguishness and romance and topped all sorts of lists of top box-office attractions and best-looking men and stoked the daydreams of the desk-bound for a decade.

What he doesn't understand is why that means to some people that all he could possibly have to say on a very serious subject is, as he says in self-parody, "'Hey, I'm Bob Redford, and I'm here to get mellow. Let's all get behind the sun!'"

He does maintain a flash of humor over his predicament.

Halfway through a statement he was reading at a recent press conference held by the Solar Lobby, the group that gave us the exuberant masses of Sun Day last spring, the bright lights of a hand-held camera clicked off, throwing him into shadow. He smiled the smile of the Sundance Kid. "Was I just getting too boring?" he said.

On the wall of his New York office hangs a Doonesbury cartoon which mentions "recluses like Redford," a reference to his devotion to privacy and dislike of interviews.

In the rumpled hideout deep within the gleaming corporate coils of Warner Communications, he says very little that is not directly related to the subject of alternative energy sources, a subject shifted by Iran's revolutionary fervor from the merely topical to the exquisitely urgent. The press, he says, just wants to "cover every nook and cranny of my life."

Reporters ignore what he has to say about solar energy in favor of describing yet again "what color my hair is and that I'm wearing hand-tooled cowboy boots. Even when they're not hand-tooled."

For the record: The boots are not hand-tooled. The eyes are ice-blue. The hair looks as if it might be an alternative energy source. The dilemma is as old as the blond who wants to be loved for her bon mots, the math whiz who wants the winning touchdown.

The sense of irony over his situation is missing.

He shrugs, and walks the line between disappointment in his own press-conference impact and a desire not to sound like a walking wounded ego.

"I was there for the draw," he says. He mentions that his presence was not mentioned in the press.

"Of course, it's better that I go to the press conference and not be mentioned than I take away from what the Solar Lobby is trying to do. But I wouldn't go just to be the fatted calf."

He doesn't want to sit gleaming with his gold hair and gilded mystique trapped in the cage of his own glamor. The involvement — in consumer action, solar energy, Indian rights, strip mining, political fundraising, endangered species, lands and life styles — is serious.

Occasionally the anger flashes. The Department of Energy is mentioned.

"Putting Schlesinger in charge of energy," he says, "is like putting Dracula in charge of a blood bank."

In the beginning, he sought publicity for his causes. In 1976, for instance, he took his opposition to a proposed nuclear power plant to national television. A public burning in effigy was one of his rewards.

"I was a little naive about what the reaction would be," he says. "I began to learn in what ways my participation in a project did harm and in which ways it could be helpful."

Now, Robert Redford channels his involvement into the more traditional, less glamorous tributaries of the actively committed. He visits local Chambers of Commerce. He talks to farmers in Iowa about the uses to which they could put solar energy. He writes letters to newspaper rebutting the big splashy ads the oil companies pay for.

"There is," he says, "a revolving set of people who just go from cause to cause. They're into being into things. You encounter a lot of that. Like Sun Day — after it was over, a lot of the people just disappeared. I don't want my involvement in somehing to be like that."

So he takes the dreary little shuttle to Washington and lobbies for the bills he cares about and asks Sen. Kennedy about SALT. He is making a six-minute film on solar energy, to be used in movie houses. He is involved in starting a National Resources Institute that would educate policy makers on energy alternatives.

And to underscore the fact that it is not all senators, campaign-drenched fundraisers and solar-heated swimming pools, he is the Sewer Commissioner of Provo Canyon, Utah.

His emphasis is on passive forms of solar energy, the ways in which individuals can economically make use of the sun's potential. The constant theme is decentralization — the need to free individual homeowners from the bureaucratic and corporate entanglements that govern their decision.

The vision is a shade romatic — "There was this tremendous warmth on the farms I visited (in the Midwest), this tremendous felling about the work ethic and what it could produce. The people I met had an uncomplicated air, a radiant look. There was a depth of devotion, a sense of place and permanence."

The statistics and the analysis flow like a mountain stream, but he does not talk as easily about the personal motivation behind it all, the drive that leaves him looking, at the end of the afternoon, as fizzled as any penurious Washington public-interest type. Despite the silver-studed cowboy belt.

He hasn't made a movie in more than two years, in part to have time to devote to his causes, but he is making one now. "I am, after all, an actor first." The film, The Electric Horseman, is about an aging rodeo star in wild rebellion at the end of his career.

He wrote a book during part of that time. The Outlaw Trail is about a trip he took along the escape routes once haunted by Butch Cassidy, areas now threatened by the encroaching demands of development. Some have said he romanticized the characters he wrote about, made light of their rather murderous ways.

"I've heard that comment," he says. "But it isn't an effection for outlaws I have. It was more that I identified with them. In those days, the smart money was on the outlaw."

He himself came from what he describes as a "perfectly normal middle-class environment," the son of an accountant for Standard Oil in Santa Monica. He tried college at the University of Colorado; it involved "being drunk for a year" before setting out for France with an ambition to be an artist.

"I've always been an outsider," he says. "I was just a product of the times. It was the '50s — the whole neat lawns, short hair, best foot forward success-oriented Dale Carnegie mentality wasn't mine."

Back in New York, art led to acting. The theater took him to Broadway and Barefoot in the Park. A spate of television plays and several movies later, it was stardom in 1969 with Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid.

He is asked if the activism is a counterweight to the hordes of melting women that followed, the devotion offered wholesale to his good looks and his way with a smile.

"I don't think I'm that good looking," he mutters, and ducks his head. "But I don't want to get into that."

But yes, it is a matter, in part, "of feeling more complete, of figuring out where you fit into the scheme of things. Doing something outside yourself helps the private self as well."

Perhaps some of that self has some insecurity of its own to combat. "I'm not well-educated," he says. "Maybe I want to prove something to myself. To be taken seriously."

It should all be so simple, but because he's Robert Redford, it isn't. "I'm just trying," he says, his voice muffled by the walls that separate the mystique from the mystified, "to carve out a place for myself to live."

Robert Redford heads for the door in the reception area outside his office, a young woman stares. "Excuse me for asking a dumb question," she says. "But is that . . . Is that . . ?"

"Yes," says the secretary. "It is."

Twisters Go on Deadly Rampage

Automobiles in Wichita Falls, Texas, shopping centre were left stacked like toy cars in a playroom Tuesday when tornado ripped through city Tuesday leaving a trail of death and destruction. Twisters picked off a number of communities on the Texas-Oklahama border. At right Jack Lytle of Lawton, Okla., surveys the damage to his home. At last report 50 persons had been killed as a result of the violent weather disturbances and the toll was mounting. Property damage was estimated in the millions of dollars.

Outboards Linked To Accused

The purchasers of three outboard motors found by police at a campsite and a cache site of 439 bales of marijuana in Shelter Inlet northwest of Tofino July 15 were identified in county court Tuesday.

They were bought by one of five men standing trial for drug conspiracy and a man named but not indicted as an alleged co-conspirator, according to testimony from salesman Richard Barling.

Barling, a salesman at a marine shop in Vancouver, identified the two men who purchased the three engines June 12 and 14 as Ronald Spurrell and Gordon Tait.

He identified Spurrell in court and he identified Gordon Tait from a series of photographs produced by an earlier police witness.

The serial numbers on receipts recognized by Barling matched three given the court by Const. Gary Appleton of the RCMP who said he found two of them at the cache site on Obstruction Island and one of them across Shelter Inlet at a campsite near the mouth of the Megin River.

Five men — Ronald Cecil Spurrell, 31, of Surrey; Frank Piersanti, 28, of Montreal; John Mobley Doss, 25, of Dillon, Colo., formerly from Newfoundland; Garth Clarence Vincent Joseph Sexton, 28, of Vancouver; and Frederick Charles Scott, 28, of Vancouver — are accused of conspiracy to import marijuana, with 14 named persons and persons unknown between April 1 and July 16, 1978; importing marijuana between the same dates; and possession of marijuana July 15 for the purpose of trafficking.

The 14 persons named but not charged in the indictment are Nilo Batista, Maurice Pereira, Neil Maxwell Kennedy, Terrance Gerard Trainor, Kevin Gerard Gushue, Robert Sherman Miller, Gordon Barlow Tait, Frederick MacKintosh Tait, Allen Valenti, Patrick Joseph Murphy, Edwin Floyd Terry also known as Philip Stanley Ward, Melville Douglas Balfour, Jillian Penney and Vicki Hann.

Const. Murray Clark, a drug analyst at the RCMP crime laboratory in Vancouver, agreed in cross-examination that samples of the bales of marijuana and other exhibits identified as being marijuana were very poor quality.

He also said that while numerous items of clothing contained one or more of the constituent compounds of cannabis, he did not believe that the amounts were large enough to be seen on a microscope.

He obtained his readings by soaking the clothing with petroleum ether and than analyzing the solution after it had run through each item of clothing.

Clark agreed that the compounds could get into clothing from a person smoking marijuana in a small galley or tent.

He also agreed that in the numerous exhibits he handled, only about 11 marijuana seeds were found.

Clark was asked if microscopic contamination could occur to the hands and be passed on to other clothing in a case where one man collected clothing from 11 persons and the first item of clothing had all three compounds of cannabis and seeds. He said he supposed it could.

But in that event, he added, he would expect the same compounds to show on each item and his results showed a variation.

He agreed that an expert's evaluation of marijuana indicated that the best quality would be hundreds of times better than some of the marijuana he analyzed and that samples other than from the bales were a hundred times stronger than the samples from the bales.

The amount of compounds on the clothing was as little as one-100,000th of a gram, he said.

Matsqui gunshop operator Richard Holtsbaum identified a rifle he said he sold to a man named Trainor on May 27, 1978, from his copy of the receipt he gave.

He identified Trainor from a list of photographs produced in court.

He also sold another gun to a man named Tait whom he identified as Frederick Tait in a list of photographs.

Before The Judge

A 21-year-old Canadian Armed Forces man was committed Tuesday by Judge Fred Green in Victoria provincial court for higher-court trial on a charge of attempted murder.

Green ordered the committal of Kenneth Andrew Burgess, formerly of 1180 Colville, on a charge of attempting to murder a 4½-year-old girl Dec. 21 at the same apartment block, assault with intent to wound, main or disfigure and being unlawfully in a dwelling house.

Judge Blake Allan remanded an 18-year-old in custody until May 7 for a pre-sentence report after a guilty plea to a charge of breaking and entering.

Elbert John Conibear entered the guilty plea to a break-in early Tuesday morning at the Amor de Cosmos Co-Op, 558 Pandora.

Conibear told police he had been drinking earlier and borrowed some money and broke in to get some more money.

Mulligan said Conibear was convicted of breaking and entering in January, 1978, and was given a sentence of six months definite and six months indeterminate. He was also convicted Aug. 4, 1978, of possession of stolen property and was given a 30-day jail term.

Two men were detained in custody for election of trial method and possible bail hearing.

Alfred Joseph Dorion, 26, of no fixed address, and Gregory Paul Huebner, 19, of 243 Kingston, were charged with breaking and entering Dunsmuir Super Service, 1321 Yates, and with theft over $200, a truck belonging to the provincial government.

An Oak Bay police spokesman said a truck stolen overnight from the service station was spotted speeding on Foul Bay Road at about 12:45 a.m. Tuesday. Officers stopped it at Hampshire and Oak Bay Avenue but the vehicle got under way with a second Oak Bay police vehicle joining in the chase. At Fort and Morrison, the driver lost control and the vehicle smashed into a tree.

A 24-year-old Esquimalt man was fined $1,000 and had about $500 in scuba diving equipment forfeited to the Crown after pleading guilty to catching more than his limit of abilone April 1 at Cattle Point.

Peter Arne Brown, 612 Wilson, pleaded guilty to the charge under the Pacific Shellfish Regulations and crown counsel John Savage told the court Brown and two others were spotted in wet suits by provincial fisheries officers at about 4 p.m.

They found 86 abilone in the vessel being used by the men and Brown admitted he was responsible for all of them. Savage said the limit was 12 per person.

SCHOOL COUNSELLORS wore hard hats for tour of Burrard Yarrows Corp. shipyard in Esquimalt to observe working conditions and job opportunities first hand.

Trustees Blast McGeer Over 'Homework' Charge

Members of the Victoria School Board are riled over veiled accusations by Education Minister Pat McGeer that senior staff hasn't done its homework in preparing the district's capital spending needs.

"The minister is dead wrong," trustee John Young said at a meeting of the board Tuesday night.

Young said McGeer's comments, contained in a letter to the board March 15, were highly inappropriate and unfairly critical of superintendent Allan Stables.

In his letter McGeer referred to Stables' claim that ministry officials are difficult to deal with and said senior staff would have to answer some important questions before the ministry could make further progress in the development of a capital plan for the district.

The questions surround the board's policies over long-term planning of school facilities, especially with respect to closing some schools or amalgamating others.

Two months ago the ministry cut 80 per cent of the school board's capital budget, ostensibly because of a lack of planning in the district.

Young rejected McGeer's contentions.

"The ministry wants everything their own way," Young said. "Obviously we know what our capital needs are."

The board decided to refer the letter to its planning and education committee for further action.

In other business the board agreed to rejoin the British Columbia School Trustees Association and set aside $33,000 from its budget to pay dues covering last year and this.

The board cancelled its membership last year and was the only one in the province not belonging.

As expected the board unanimously approved funding up to $27,400 towards a gifted student program that Esquimalt secondary principal Keith Bickmore intends to establish at his school in September.

Approval was given to a $1,570,913 contract from Dura Construction for repairs and renovations to the heating and ventilation systems at Victoria secondary. The funds come from last year's capital budget. Dura was the lowest of four bidders.

The board passed a motion submitted by trustee Peter Yorke calling for more emphasis on Canadian studies in school curricula. Ironically, 10 months ago Yorke had voted against a similar proposal.

Another motion submitted by Trustee Glyn Williams asking that the board write to the Canadian Union of Public Employees expressing disappointment over the union's rejection of youth employment programs was narrowly defeated.

Chairman Carol Pickup called the proposal a direct affront which would lead to confrontation with the union.

Counsellors Change Hats

It's tough to describe a shipyard if you've never seen one so counsellors from seven Victoria secondary schools donned hard hats Tuesday and toured the mammoth Burrard Yarrows Corp. operation in Esquimalt to learn about working conditions first hand.

They later went behind the scenes at The Empress to tour parts of the hotel never seen by tourists — the kitchens, laundry room and linen stocks.

The tour is a new program designed to give school counsellors a better idea of job opportunities and working conditions.

It was organized by Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce with the co-operation of the Greater Victoria school board and the Canada Employment Centre.

"It was very well received by the teachers," chamber manager Brian Small said today.

"It is much easier to describe a job to young people when you have actually seen people working in that job."

As a measure of the success of the program, he said, many counsellors indicated they would favor the tours on a regular monthly basis.

Small said the chamber is considering the request.

The tour was the conclusion of a two-day program. On Monday the counsellors attended a day-long workshop conducted by Youth Employment Centre manager Susan Vallor who outlined job-hunting techniques and employment information sources available through the Canada Employment Centre.

On Tuesday, Small took the counsellors on tour, first to Burrard Yarrows Corp., and then to Canoe Cove Manufacturing, a company that makes patrol vessels and other large boats.

In the afternoon the group toured The Empress.

The counsellors found it was a different world behind the scenes, Small said, with 450 employees in various jobs from kitchen help to electricians and timekeepers. In the summer, he said, The Empress work force grows to 550 people, creating 100 additional job opportunities.

Saanich Won't Ban Smoking

Saanich school board has vetoed a suggestion that a strict no-smoking policy be adopted in schools throughout the district.

The total ban had been proposed by trustee Norma Sealey.

But trustees were told the policy would not only be difficult to enforce but likely raise objections from school staff and adults who use the buildings after hours.

Claremont secondary principal Don MacKinnon said an extension of the no-smoking policy already in force in his school would likely just drive smokers to adjacent properties. He added any attempt to enforce such a rule would have negative overtones.

Parklands principal Joe Lott, however, said his school instituted a strict no-smoking policy last year and felt it had deterred many young people from smoking.

Lyle Garraway of Stelly's secondary said students are allowed to smoke in designated areas provided they have a note from their parents. But he warned a total ban would only create problems.

Vantreight Case Quashed

Following the day-long preliminary hearing, Ostler ruled that Crown counsel Digby Kier had not presented enough evidence to warrant the case going to trial.

Vantreight was charged under the name of G.A. Vantreight and Sons with "knowingly conveying within Canada, plant or other matter that was likely to be infested with a pest, to wit, potatoe cyst nematode." The act allegedly took place Sept. 29 at or near Mill Bay.

Ostler referred to testimony from an Ottawa expert on nematology who stated the possibility of a Vantreight truck alleged to have been carrying the potatoes infested with "golden nematode" was less than one per cent.

Defence lawyer Warren Fensom, in his motion to have the charge quashed, said there was no evidence of where the soil on the truck came from or that the bags containing cull potatoes came from Vantreight's property.

Following the decision, Vantreight said he would have had to resign if he had been convicted of the criminal offence.

Section 50 (i) of the Municipal Act reads: "Anyone who has been convicted upon indictment of an offence in Canada, unless he has been pardoned, therefore or unless five years have elapsed since completion of the punishment or who is disqualified from being nominated, being elected and from holding office as a member of council."

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass

Opening lead: three of hearts.

There are times when it looks as though you've bitten off more than you can chew. You then start to wonder, after dummy appears, how and why your side got up so high.

Granting that it's all your partner's fault, which it has to be if you want to maintain your self-respect, you should still try to make the contract even though the outlook seems poor.

Let's assume you get to four spades and West leads a heart, which you win with the ace. You can see at once that your chances are not good, since you have two spades, a heart and a diamond to lose.

There are two different ways to react to such a predicament. First, you look for a legitimate way to make four spades. In doing so, you try to conjure up ways the defenders' cards can be divided so that the contract can be made on its merits.

Second, if you can't dream up the desired division, you try to concoct a scheme that will do the opponents out of what they're entitled to. Thus, you could cross to dummy and lead the queen of spades, hoping that East, holding K-x, will cover with the king and crash his partner's ace.

But then you realize that East wasn't born yesterday, so you go back to your first thought — to try to make four spades legitimately. And then suddenly it hits you. If the clubs are divided 3-3, you will be a heavy favorite to make the contract.

So you cash the A-K-Q of clubs, everyone following suit, and then lead the jack of clubs, planning to discard a heart from dummy regardless of what West plays on the trick.

As it happens, East is the one who ruffs the club, but you later lose only one trump trick and so make the contract. Never give up!

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Thursday, April 12
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Maintain low profile, check sources, quotations — take nothing for granted. Be familiar with legal rights, permissions. Marital status, contracts, partnerships are spotlighted. Pisces, Virgo persons figure prominently.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Emphasis on dependents, getting chores finished, evaluating efforts, time and motion, money in and out, worth of a relationship. Capricorn, Cancer — and the number 8 — figure prominently. One you respect lends benefit of experience — and wisdom.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Lunar aspects coincides with style, creativity, emotional responses, exciting changes and prospects. You are rid of restriction. Communication, display and distribution improve. Aries, Libra figure prominently.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Avoid premature starts, decisions — be creatively selfish. Means keep resolutions concerning your own safety, security, welfare and health. A family member, older and accustomed to giving orders, might listen if you put your foot down. Act accordingly.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You get proof of validity of your concepts. Means idea pays off — your judgment, intuition are on target. You are praised, complimented for your knowledge of "psychology". Cancer, Capricorn, Aquarius persons figure prominently.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Expansion, celebration, freedom, lucky streak and money crowd agenda. Gemini, Sagittarius persons play key roles. Accent on lost-and-found, investments, getting a foothold on financial security. Don't let any person intimidate you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You break through maze of red tape, suspicion. More persons are willing to listen — and take action. Charisma is emphasized. You can win — know it and take initiative. Make known your views — and presence.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Study Libra message. Aura of mystery leads to glamour. Know it and don't brood. You do not have to know everything at once. Some persons wish to "draw you in" to a secret operation, clandestine meeting. Keep your eyes open — wide!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Accent on friends, hopes, persuasiveness, money realized from business enterprise. Domestic adjustment, change of residence could figure high on agenda. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio persons play significant roles.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your natural abilities surge to forefront. Accent on prestige, reputation, honor, career. You might feel as if you are a tightrope walker. Reinforce aspirations, sense of direction. Steer clear of schemes and "characters".

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): View of potential comes into focus. Older individual does have your best interest at heart. You'll know it and dialogue will result. Make travel plans. Write, communicate, advertise and publish. Your faith will be restored.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You resolve dilemma centering around money, partnership, marriage. Complete assignment. Get rid of burden which actually belongs to someone else. Aries, Virgo and Libra persons figure prominently. You learn secret — use it to advantage.

IF APRIL 12 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are versatile, creative, headstrong, artistic and have a weight problem. You are fond of travel, capable of expressing yourself in manner that leads to meaningful communication. Gemini, Sagittarius persons play key roles in your life. You make serious domestic adjustments this year, including a possible change of residence. February was a pressure period. September and November will be memorable. During May, next month, you come to terms with family member who appears to have lost sense of direction. Your best course, during 1979, is one of diplomacy. You can win your way — you lose if you attempt to force issues. When people first meet you, there is a tendency to be "afraid". Later, it becomes evident that you possess charm, that you are loyal, that you will aid others without fanfare. You're alright, even though you want to have your own way.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

Ben shook his head. "I never saw the like of that before," he declared. "A clean break almost right through the mast. Must have been rotten."

"You can say that again." Roy chuckled. "I've been checking. Its top is resting on the deck 12 feet from the lower part, and the break would have been halfway up from the deck if it had been four feet higher."

39 PERSONALS

ANY PLEASANT, THIRTYISH woman, humorous, thinking, warm, some cultural, culinary interests, willing to teach lovely girl to sew, assist well-mannered teenage boy in growing up? Deal could include father, professional man, university grad, witty, generous, fortyish, non-roamer, non-drinker, non-smoker, good provider, but with some recent emotional scar tissue. Otherwise excellent catch. Very permanent friendship please. Box 772, Victoria Press.

S THERE SOMEONE WITHIN the reach of this media looking for a retired gent, I'm retired, age 61. Very meticulous, being English, who would like to share apartment and expenses. Must like homelifke rather than rat race. Must be neat, tidy, presentabley to my family etc. Also, in the apartment. Race, creed, age, faith, no object. More could be said over a phone call. P.S. Must like flowers and good music. Victoria Press Box 774.

ATTRACTIVE CHRISTIAN, healthy with a zest for living, enjoys home life, gardening, travelling and the sea. Would like to meet an active gentleman, nonsmoker, nondrinker, with old fashioned ideals who would like to meet a one man type of woman for friendship 60-75. Victoria Press Box 752.

YOUNG COUPLE, AFFECtionate and attractive, would like to meet same, for a warm and wonderful, lasting friendship. Please write and send with a photograph to Victoria Press, Box 755.

HOW TO WRITE

CLASSIFIED ACTION

AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

309 IN MEMORIAM

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD, AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN, AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
— WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS

The Lord is my Shepherd
I shall not want
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures
He leadeth me beside the still waters
He restoreth my soul
He leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his name sake
Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death
I will fear no evil
For thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies
Thou anointest my head with oil
My cup runneth over
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Lord forever.

Answer to yesterday's puzzle.

GARDENING
hilda beastall

Convenience homes produce convenience gardening and like all convenience inventions, this type of gardening brings its own problems. One of these, and perhaps the most important, is watering.

Because living plants are an esthetic, and psychological necessity for us in today's urban society, let us begin at the top level of gardening — the roof garden.

Under open sky, exposed to unobstructed sun's rays to stimulate sturdy growth, one might think this the ideal situation for plants. But talk to a prairie farmer and you'll hear about devastating winds travelling for miles before they reach your home, and your farm plants. These winds are what bring distruction to plants more than a few inches tall.

In our coastal gardens, wind removes moisture from foliage whether it is in form of leaves, or needles and scales as in the conifers. On rooftops we get a clean sweep from the Straits in one direction or another with little or no obstruction except perhaps another tall building some blocks away.

Even though the wind at this season may bring in a rain shower, it is surprising to find that a given spot of ground (in the open) may indeed receive no more than a few drops. The wind velocity keeps the drops moving until an object, such as a plant or house window causes them to stop.

We have often been surprised at the few drops of moisture collected in our official rain gauge after a shower, while noticing the quantity running down the glass of windows facing the direction of the wind.

All this adds up to checking the beds of plants in the roof garden for moisture content. Water gently and slowly until the soil mixture is well dampened throughout.

In the next level of gardening, the balconies, the problem exists in a different form. If facing prevailing rainy winds, a little rain will reach tubs and planters but although humidity will be improved the soil may still be quite dry.

This dryness of soil is a strange thing. It has been pointed out that plants do not use water for its own value to them; but they do need it for the nutrients it brings to their root area. If the root area is dry no food can be picked up in solution by the feeding roots for conversion and transmission to the growing points.

A sprinkling of rain (or tap water) on leaf surface or soil surface provides a little humidity in the air; a temporary measure of refreshment to plants but not taking the place of moisture at root level.

A patio garden, usually situated in a sheltered position with perhaps two sheltering sides, needs a bit of checking for moisture. Thinking it is at ground level and outdoors, one might not believe tubs and small beds of plants need water now.

In this situation, it may be that concrete or cement of the pad, the walls, or the house walls is taking much of the natural moisture, and also absorbing some of the amount you provide. Check these soil areas too.

If hanging containers are already in place outdoors, see that their water requirements are met. With moving air on all sides, their loss is more than for plants in stationary positions, at any level.

Discovering the water needs for your particular level of gardening early in the season will help you fulfill the expectations of beauty in the long growing time ahead.

Saanich Concert

The Saanich Peninsula Orchestra will hold a spring concert at Stelly's secondary school April 18.

The first half of the concert which begins at 8 p.m. will be mostly Canadian content and includes suite for orchestra, Miramichi Ballad by Kelsey Jones, and a medley of three songs composed and arranged by orchestra member Peter Gardner.

During the second half, the orchestra will perform Beethoven's Second Symphony.

There will be a silver collection.

The orchestra is sponsored by the Saanich School District's Continuing Education program and is one of the few full-time amateur school orchestras in the province.

Violence, Co-Ed Schools Linked

Written for CP
By NORMAN CRIBBENS

MANCHESTER, England (CP) — Large co-educational schools are being blamed by the British Association of Schoolmasters and Women Teachers for the growth of violence and lack of discipline among teen-agers in Britain.

A survey carried out by the association in more than 600 co-ed schools found that discipline was lax in nearly three-quarters of them.

"More than a third of the incidents of indiscipline reported by teachers in these schools were of a serious nature, such as assault, damage to property, theft, truancy and drug-taking," the survey said.

"Men are usually better at dealing with disciplinary problems among boys. Women teachers cope better with difficult girls."

Terence Casey, general secretary of the teachers' association, says co-educational schools were one of the causes of the growth of disruption and bad behavior in schools.

"There may be educational reasons for wanting co-education, but from the disciplinary point of view there are fewer problems in single-sex schools.

"Any bunch of girls in a co-ed school can twist a male teacher round their little fingers, but a woman teacher is not so susceptible to their wiles," Casey says.

"Girls are more vicious than boys in co-ed schools," Miss Skevington says.

"Boys will accept a punishment or reprimand and come up smiling. Girls copy what the boys do, but they are much more vicious and nasty because they bear grudges and try to get their own back afterwards."

The association's survey said many teachers complained that headmasters and headmistresses did not give a strong enough lead against indiscipline in their schools.

"A total of 24 per cent of the teachers felt that their heads (principals) were unsupportive, while 47 per cent of the heads were regarded as both indecisive and inconsistent in their style of leadership and management.

"Heads were often reported as being fearful for the good name of their school or afraid of the reaction of parents or local education authorities. Very often they appeared unaware that a problem of indiscipline existed in their schools."

Some members of the teachers' association complained that many principals were trying to reduce parental power by refusing to allow parent-teacher associations in their schools.

Frances Taylor, author of a book of advice to parents, says:

"Theoretically there is nothing to stop a group of parents from setting up their own organization and getting permission direct from the local education authority to meet in the school. But this should be only a last resort."

Swedish Envoy's Case Won't Die

By VINCENT BUIST

STOCKHOLM (Reuter) — A 34-year-old mystery surrounding the disappearance of a Swedish envoy sent into Budapest during the Second World War to help Hungarian Jews escape from the Nazis still haunts relations between Stockholm and Moscow.

Raoul Wallenberg, a member of a rich, influential Swedish banking and industrial family, was credited with saving the lives of 1,000 Jews — some reports say many thousands — before the defeated German army pulled out of Budapest in 1944.

He was seen last in January, 1945, being driven off to see Marshal Rodion Malinovsky, commander of Soviet troops who swarmed into the city. His driver also disappeared.

Eventually a report said that Wallenberg was tried in the Soviet Union for espionage — despite the fact that he was a diplomat from a neutral power — and imprisoned in Moscow's notorious Lubianka Jail, where, official Soviet statements show, he died in 1947.

But over the last 35 years persistent reports have reached Stockholm from prisoners of Soviet jails that Raoul Wallenberg has been seen in a number of prisons and labor camps.

As recently as last January Sweden sent the latest in a long series of notes to Soviet authorities requesting more information on Wallenberg, citing eyewitnesses as saying he was seen in a Moscow prison hospital — by now sick in mind and body — as recently as 1975.

As before, Moscow replied that Wallenberg died in the Lubianka in 1947, adding that the case is considered closed.

The Lubianka jail, less than one kilometre from the Kremlin, is the prison and interrogation centre where generations of suspects from the earliest days of the Bolshevik Revolution were held and grilled for real or imaginary crimes.

One of its more recent graduates was Alexander Solzhenitsyn, the exiled Soviet writer who has catalogued the existence of labor camps across the Soviet hinternald.

Muscovites have a grim joke about the Lubianka being the tallest building in Moscow. Actually it is far from being so but, as the saying goes, from its windows "you can see Siberia."

When former Soviet party leader Nikita Khrushchev paid an official visit to Sweden in 1964 the Wallenberg case was raised by the Swedes. His terse reply was that Wallenberg died in Lubianka in 1947.

Then in a rambling statement Khrushchev added that under Stalin enormous tragedies took place. In a characteristic outburst he said he could not be held to account for all the things that happened under Stalin.

In 1944, Raoul Wallenberg was equipped with a diplomatic passport, which should confer immunity from arrest, and sent to the Swedish Embassy in Budapest as a first secretary to try to help evacuate Hungarian Jews who otherwise faced extermination at Nazi hands.

It was claimed after the war that some of these passes fell into the hands of Hungarian Nazis and criminal elements who were able to escape Soviet justice. No one knows whether the claim was true, or if it had anything to do with Wallenberg's disappearance.

To save the lives of thousands of Jews, Wallenberg had to negotiate with the Nazis and offer them something. On the Nazi side one of the chief officials handling negotiations was Adolf Eichmann, the war criminal kidnapped in Argentina by an Israeli squad and was hanged in Israel after trial.

There is some obscurity surrounding the Jewish organizations working to release as many Jews as possible before the Germans abandoned the Hungarian capital, killing their captives. Some were infiltrated by communist agents who later surfaced in spy trials in Hungary and Czechoslovakia.

One mystery is why successive Soviet leaders should have felt the need to cover up if Wallenberg is indeed still alive. Khrushchev could have put the blame on Stalin. Brezhnev could have pointed a finger at Khrushchev.

Singapore: City of Joggers

By JOHN FREEMAN

SINGAPORE (Reuter) — Just after dawn as the blistering equatorial heat builds, Singapore's streets come alive with hordes of determined men preparing for another busy day at the office.

Heads down, beads of perspiration clearly visible, they are out for their regular morning jog, a booming local pastime which is helping to keep Singaporeans fit enough to cope with the rigors of modern life.

From Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew down, the country's decision-makers and workers have become increasingly aware of the need for physical fitness in combatting pressures in everyday work.

The core of Singapore's fight for fitness is the Sports Council, a government-financed body.

The Sports, Medicine and Research Centre concentrates much of its energy on trying to get across the message that fitness is important for everyone, not just for sportsmen.

To meet a growing need for more information on how to improve general fitness, a health and fitness club was set up at the centre and already has a membership of more than 400.

In addition, more than 5,000 Singaporeans have been in touch with the centre over the last two years to seek expert advice on the best way of achieving desirable levels of fitness.

The centre offers a wide range of literature giving details of recommended exercises in suggested diets and the results of studies on how different sports rate in promoting physical fitness.

Amin Flees As Kampala Falls

Times News Services

KAMPALA — Uganda's capital fell to an invasion force of Tanzanians and Ugandan exiles early today. Residents greeted the "liberators" with flowers and bananas and by beating some of President Idi Amin's remaining troops to death.

Amin was reported to have fled Kampala on Tuesday for his new headquarters in Jinja, 80 kilometres to the east, and some unconfirmed reports said he headed even farther eastward to Tororo, near the border with Kenya.

Loudspeakers urged Ugandan troops still holding out to surrender and residents were told to stay indoors until the city of 400,000 was totally secure.

But the Kampalans took to the streets at daybreak and a carnival atmosphere prevailed as they kissed their conquerors and chanted "Nyerere Only!" and "Nyerere, Nyerere!" referring to Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere.

They also swarmed over tanks that led the Tanzanians into the outskirts of the city, looted stores and offered the booty to the invaders and beat knots of Ugandan soldiers to death.

Lt. Col. Awaiti Ojok, the Ugandan exile military commander took to the airwaves of Radio Kampala and proclaimed: "The lying racist, fascist regime is no longer in power."

Sources in the Tanzanian capital of Dar Es Salaam said they expected members of the government in exile, led by scholar Youssef Lule, to arrive in Kampala in the next few days, even if Amin fought on in the provinces.

Lule already has announced that he will rule Uganda for two years, then hold national elections to establish a permanent government.

The invaders started into Kampala on Tuesday afternoon after a night-long artillery bombardment, followed by a fierce rocket, artillery and jet fighter aircraft attack in the morning and early afternoon. Despite the heavy bombardment, there was little visible damage to homes and commercial buildings.

The Tanzanian column from the south was commanded by spear-brandishing Lt.-Col. Ben Msekwa, who ran ahead of his troops to lead them whenever resistance was encountered. Heavy automatic weapons fire was poured into pockets of Ugandan holdouts, silencing them.

The Tanzanians and their Ugandan allies completed their penetration of the city during the night, charging isolated groups of Amin's troops in attacks launched by bugle calls.

"About 5 p.m., the brigades entered the city and got fire from small groups of five to 10 Ugandan soldiers," he said. "The Tanzanians fired back very heavily, with artillery, tanks, maching-guns and very quickly disposed of the pockets.

"There was looting in downtown Kampala but the Tanzanians were trying to stop them."

Tanzanian forces were trying to stop civilian auto traffic in the city because Ugandan troops were reportd trying to flee in cars.

Auxiliary RCMP Quit

The crunch in the Victoria area could come tonight when the Colwood RCMP auxiliary group meets to discuss a withdrawal of service.

Sgt. Mel Stern, officer in charge of the auxiliary program in the province, said nine other groups have already suspended services.

They include those in Duncan, Courtenay, Chase, Kelowna, Langley, Abbotsford, 100 Mile House, Williams Lake and Coquitlam.

There are 1,350 auxiliaries attached to 128 detachments throughout the province.

Although the auxiliary program has been in existence for 16 years, it was only last week members learned the government will not cover them if they are involved in mishaps on patrols or become involved in civil actions arising out of their work.

Const. Elton Deans, supervisor of the auxiliary program in Colwood, said the loss of the auxiliaries could have far-reaching implications.

At present the 17 members contribute 800 hours of volunteer work a month, providing crowd control and security at Western Speedway, helping regular officers patrol high crime areas, and assisting in crime prevention programs.

Superintendent George Scott of RCMP headquarters in Victoria said that efforts are being made to resolve the problem.

Killer Twisters Devastate Texas-Oklahoma Border

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (UPI) — National Guardsmen and police watching for looters patrolled streets jammed with mangled cars and debris today while workers began the grisly process of removing bodies from beneath tornado-smashed buildings.

At least 50 people, 34 of them in this oil city of 100,000, were killed by the twisters that strafed communities along the Texas-Oklahoma border Tuesday evening and injured more than 600 in the area known as "tornado alley."

There was some confusion early today as to whether one or two tornadoes had hit Wichita Falls. Some said two funnel clouds merged into one with two tails.

While hospital employees worked under emergency power in a frantic effort to treat bloody victims jamming emergency rooms, law enforcement authorities faced the major task of keeping looters out of both devastated areas and sections left unprotected by lawmen responded to the emergency.

"Besides the casualties, the worst problem is the looting," said police administrative assistant Don Pilcher in Wichita Falls.

Looting also was reported in other communities, but only Wichita Falls authorities reported "several arrests" of people who smashed in windows and tried to escape with television sets, jewelry and other merchandise.

Dozens of bodies were at a temporary morgue by early today, and authorities feared the death toll would mount steadily as the search for victims in the twisters' four-block wide, six-mile-long path continued.

Officials said they had not even begun looking through the rubble of what had been apartment complexes.

Pay Again, Eaton's Man Asks

The comptroller of Eatons' Vancouver store Tuesday, asked customers who paid for purchases with cheques stolen in a $378,000 robbery to phone his office so they can be re-charged and the store can recover some its stolen revenue.

Ross Bird appealed to "public honesty" because, he said, the department store does not have a record of the cheques stolen from two Loomis Armored Car guards in a store elevator Monday.

Tom Eddy of Loomis Armored Car Co. said today the loss is the responsibility of his company.

Two armed men who hid in a freight elevator robbed the guards as they took the store's weekend receipts to an armored vehicle.

Police said Tuesday an intense overnight search of the city had turned up no trace of the men, the cheques or the $150,000 in cash also taken in the robbery.

Noise Adds 20 Years?

TORONTO (CP) — Industrial noise can accelerate the effects of natural aging by as much as 20 years, says a Toronto ear, nose and throat specialist.

"Industrial noise can be such an overwhelming experience for some that a 40-year-old man can look like a 60-year-old," Dr. Peter Alberti of Mount Sinai Hospital told a conference on industrial accident prevention Tuesday.

Excessive noise can accelerate aging by destroying the capacity of the ear to transform sound vibrations into nervous impulse which, in turn, results in an inability to hear high frequencies.

"It's known in the trade as the cocktail party effect," Alberti said.

"You lose the ability to tune in and out at will and can't make out what people are saying in crowd situations. It' all a jumble."

While strong unions in the North are alert to the problem and are forcing the issue, workers in industrial areas of southern Ontario and British Columbia are just waking up to the problem, he said.

Trains Worse Than Planes

VANCOUVER (UPC) — Residents around Vancouver International Airport who are upset about airplane noise may in fact suffer more from the whistles of passing trains.

A study of noise levels around the airport, released Tuesday, showed while the sound of a DC-8 flying overhead was slightly less than that of a Boeing 737, the noise of a passing train whistle was louder than either.

A main branchline of the B.C. Railway runs through Richmond, adjacent to the airport, and passes within two miles of the airport's main runway en route to the city waterfront.

The noise-monitoring study by Transport Canada was part of a continuing study into the environmental impact of the airport, said transport spokesman Stephen Rybak.

The study said there have been significant changes in aviation-related noise control in recent years. Noise-abatement measures have become more common at airports and modern jet aircraft engines are designed to be quieter than their predecessors.

While the volume of jet flights to Canadian airports has increased by approximately 35 per cent, there has been no corresponding increase in noise-levels around airports, the study said.

Planes take off and land at Vancouver an average of every three minutes in an 18-hour day, six days a week.

Last year, Air Canada introduced a program of "Nighthawk" flights at the airport that produced a flood of complaints. Placard-carrying demonstrators picketed the airport demanding the proposed early-morning departures be cancelled.

Grits on Skids — Poll

Times News Services

A majority of Canadians believed three weeks before the May 22 federal election was called that the Liberal Party would get fewer votes and the Conservatives more votes than they did in 1974, a Gallup poll released today shows.

A thousand adult Canadians were asked if they thought the three major political parties would do better or worse in a new election than in 1974.

A majority — 56 per cent — believed the Liberals would lose votes while 54 per cent — believed the Conservatives would gain.

In 1978, when a similar poll was taken, 40 per cent believed the Liberals would lose votes and 37 per cent believed the Conservatives would gain.

The New Democratic Party would gain more votes this election, 32 per cent of those surveyed believe. In 1978, only 23 per cent believed the NDP would gain at the polls.

In campaigning Tuesday, Prime Minister Trudeau won plaudits from Calgary oilmen for his speech concerning the petroleum industry. He also stressed the Conservative leader Joe Clark, campaigning in the industrial and agricultural heartlands of Southern Ontario, hammered away on the theme of unemployment, saying that now it had become a "national sickness," rather than just a regional one.

(For these and other reports on the federal campaign see pages 26, 27 and 28.)

'Shock Waves' as Parrot Convicted

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The conviction of postal union leader Jean-Claude Parrot "will send shock waves through the entire labor movement," said one glum union observer at Parrot's Ontario Supreme Court trial.

The jury found Parrot, president of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW), guilty of defying Parliament's back-to-work order last October.

Parrot said today he will work for the defeat of the Liberal government that charged him.

"Like the judge said, if you don't like it change the government, and that is something we are going to try to do," Parrot said as he left court after sentencing was set for May 7.

Parrot could get a maximum penalty of two years in prison.

In announcing the sentencing date, Mr. Justice Gregory Evans said Parrot can remain out of custody until then.

"I don't believe under the circumstances that I could have expected anything else under the present system," Parrot said concerning the outcome of the trial.

The conviction will spark demonstrations protesting the court decision, a CUPW spokesman said today.

Everet Hoogers, first vice-president of the union's Vancouver local said although union members are angry CUPW doesn't expect any labor disruptions as a result.

"People are very upset about it," he said.

The question most people have been putting to him, Hoogers said, is "ask Trudeau if the jails are big enough to hold the thousands of people who support us."

Union members are saying the fact that Parrot has been convicted and may go to jail will in no way stop those in the public sector or private sector from fighting for their rights, Hoogers said.

"It has made us more determined than ever before to fight for what is rightfully ours."

He said CUPW people are not the only ones incensed by the court decision. There are telephone calls of support coming from other labor unions, he said.

The decision was a shock to most CUPW members because "we felt it was so obvious that our cause was a just one."

An angry CUPW leader in Calgary said the conviction could have an adverse effect on mail delivery in that city.

"I can't call a slowdown, but let's say none of our people will be very enthusiastic about their work," said Jim Hall, president of the 700-member Calgary local of the postal workers' union.

"People don't work for fun in the post office, they work for money," Hall said.

"We went on strike legally and the government went and manufactured laws to make us criminals."

Enviromentalists Backed Over Charlottes' Claim

A B.C. government agency has confirmed the claims of environmentalists that logging practices on the Queen Charlotte Islands cause loss of forest soils and widespread destruction to fish spawning creeks and rivers.

The report of the Environment and Land Use Committee secretariat on South Moresby Island, also contradicts the claims of the forests ministry and logging companies that clear cutting of forests lands on the islands is not detrimental to the forest environment.

It describes the Queen Charlottes as having some of the most inherently unstable terrain in the province.

"Any discussion of land use or environmental management must refer to terrain conditions," it stated.

"Here extremes of rainfall intensity, high winds, soil characteristics, steep slopes and seismic activity combine to make large tracts of land naturally unstable."

The report said the practice of clear cutting in some areas had caused land and debris slides resulting in the physical destruction of fish spawning creeks and rivers.

The avalanches are not only destroying fish spawning grounds but reducing forest productivity, it added.

The report also states that federal fisheries believes that if sensitive sites continue to be logged in the Charlottes, maintenance of fish habitat and production in commercial quantities will not be possible.

Bastion Closes its Season With a Delightful Comedy

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

To leave them laughing is one of the prime precepts of the entertainment world and Bastion Theatre has followed it in closing the curtain on its 1978-79 season at the McPherson Playhouse.

Artichoke by Canadian playwright Joanna Glass guarantees its audiences a happy memory to walk away with. While not exactly a sit-com — its implications are somewhat wider than those to be found in the average sit-com — the comedy does not have its source in the wit of the characters but totally from the situation they themselves have created.

The marriage of Walter and Margaret has been stalemated for some 16 years, since Walter erred with a female water diviner and the result arrived nine months later on the back porch in a laundry basket. Walter has slept in the smokehouse from that day forward and Lily-Agnes — "the source of their problems" as she describes herself — is a happy if slightly "tetched" teenager.

In the midst is Gramps, a sturdy three-score years and ten, Margaret's father, who manages to remain neutrally devoted to his Saskatchewan farm chores.

Onto this scene comes the invader, Gibson McFarland, who is also the play's deus ex machina. He has childhood family connections with Gramps and Margaret.

He is a university professor and has invited himself for a summer six-week stay to recover from a psychiatric problem.

His coming rouses jealousy in Walter and amorousness in Margaret and promotes a crisis that causes Walter to leave home and take cover with a couple of old bachelor neighbors. The play's theme suggests that isolation is not a matter of prairie space so much as it is a condition we create for ourselves.

Pride and inarticulateness have set a great distance between the protagonists in Artichoke. It can only be resolved when both are brought to their knees in recognition of themselves and their needs.

Director Ron Ulrich has given the production atmosphere, pace and vitality. He has kept it uncluttered so that the underlying theme emerges clearly but with an appropriate lightness of touch that avoids sentimentality.

The cast performs well as an ensemble. John Krich as Walter is effectively obtuse and handles his comedy as well as the moments that touch poignancy, with a fine sense of balance. Lally Cadeau gives a strong well defined performance as a fresh youthful looking Margaret who appears to have suffered not a whit from her years of denial.

Ron Hartmann's Gibson is an outstanding portrayal; warm, sensitive, completely believable in its disorientation and reaching out toward the security of relationships in a vanished childhood.

Robin Marshall and Gregory Reid as the bachelors create two enjoyable comic characters, who also provide a kind of chorus, presenting the exposition and commenting on the action from their own elevated kitchen.

The opening exposition is, in fact too long and one wonders from time to time why the commentary was considered necessary by playwright Glass.

Highway Workers Back In Langford

Sixteen workers of the provincial highways' sign shop at Jacklin Road in Langford were back on the job today after walking out Tuesday to protest the three-day suspension of a clerical worker.

A meeting was held by representatives of Local 1001 of the B.C. Government Employees Union and management Tuesday but in spite of the fact the worker's suspension was reduced to one day, the workers decided they would also stay out for the day.

Union spokesman Don Burns said the worker received a "dressing down" on Monday in front of others. He became emotionally upset as a result and when he said he was going home, the man was told to take an extra three days.

His co-workers decided to stay out the same amount of time as he was off the job.

Just a few midweek thoughts on fish and chips and hockey. No, they are not related. Just drifted into my mind.

Must say, I'm rather partial to fish and chips and I find it a little ironic to read in almost every news release from the Greater Victoria Visitor Information Centre reference to our city as "this little bit of Olde England tucked away on the southern tip of Vancouver Island" while over in that bastion of Englishness, Oak Bay, officials feel a fish and chip shop will lower the tone of things behind the Tweed Curtain.

Good gracious! Can't have that, chaps, can we?

That was the attitude, in fact, when Oak Bay council indicated at a recent meeting it doesn't want a fish and chip shop on sedate old Oak Bay Ave. Most adamant about it was Ald. Peter Bunn who literally turned up his nose and said fish and chips wasn't what council was told when the property was rezoned.

Bevin Doke, the man who proposed the take-out or eat-in fish and chip restaurant, isn't saying much right now as council referred the matter to one of its committees for further ponderance.

But come now, Peter old boy, don't you and the other Tweedies realize that nothing could be more English than being able to stroll through the Village delicately munching chips wrapped in newspaper?

Apparently not. For Ald. Bunn said he could look at a reputable, genuine restaurant with an open mind and Mayor Brian Smith hinted that he wouldn't mind a nice little French restaurant.

Heavens above, and may all your mothers choke on muffins! Those may be very patriotic sentiments that would undoubtedly delight Mr. Trudeau, Mayor Smith, but what on earth is happening to this little bit of Olde England tucked away beyond the Tweed Curtain?

And the hockey?

Well yes. The other day, a child of mine brought home a sheet of paper from Elsie Miles Elementary School in Shawnigan Lake.

The students in Grade 5 had been doing cinquains which, the paper explained, are short poems that have five lines. The first line is for one word representing the title. Then come two words describing the title, three words expressing action about the title, words giving the writer's feelings about it and finally, another word for the title.

So far, so good.

Cliff Thompson, too, drew a delightful word picture of the game of soccer.

"Wet, muddy; kicking, shooting, scoring; cold, fun, sore, happy," he said.

Then along came young Kevin Weiten with his thoughts on what most regard as Canada's national game, hockey.

Two words describing the title: "Fighting, punching," Kevin wrote.

What about three words expressing action: "Tripping, elbowing, penalty box."

From that you might deduce that Kevin is a little disillusioned with the hallowed game of hockey. But wait. His words expressing his feelings about the title?

"The best sport ever!"

Old Soldier Is Still Fighting

By AB KENT
Times Staff

Dutton, a Memorial Pavilion patient who's spearheading a battle to publicize staff cutbacks and a money shortage he feels will hurt patient care, is extremely articulate.

But words begin to fail him when he tells about patients who feel they are being abandoned because of provincial restraint on hospital spending.

"If a sick person is lying in the street, are they going to leave him there?" he asked.

Royal Jubilee Hospital, along with others in the province, is limited to a five per cent increase in hospital expenditure this year — not enough to provide for increased salaries negotiated last fall.

A direct result has been a cutback in nursing staff at the Memorial Pavilion and in Dutton's intermediate care ward, Alcorn 1, where only a skeleton staff remained, nursing supervision is being further reduced.

"Will the Victoria public stand idly by and let the province of B.C. tie the hands of hospital authorities behind their backs?" Dutton asks.

He has no quarrel with the hospital administrator, Dr. A.C. Pickles — "a genuine doctor with the interests of the hospital in mind. It's no fault of the administrator, but the administrators of the hospital system.

"I'm speaking primarily for the veterans, but generally the whole hospital system is having its back broken by petty bureaucracy."

A hospital spokesman said in spite of efforts to maintain a traditional level of care in the former DVA hospital, the administration was instructed to make staff adjustments bringing nursing supervision to the level provided in non-veteran intermediate care facilities.

There will be no registered nurse on duty at night in the intermediate care section, although an RN from another area would be available if necessary.

The nursing spokesman said the reduction is difficult for patients to accept and is distressing for the staff, but she made it clear that professional care still will be assigned to Alcorn 1 and 2 during the day and licensed practitioners at night.

"The RNs here are the finest in the world, a dedicated group for the veterans from the head nurse down, and breaking their backs to help us. But they're stymied at every turn."

Patients would not be getting RN supervision between 9 p.m. and 7 a.m. at the time when they are most likely to need it, Dutton said.

He said fire drill in the ward requires a person in charge to close all doors as a fire control measure as soon as the alarm sounds.

Exactly 30 minutes after he made the statement, the hospital fire alarm went off but no one came into the ward to close doors. This was reported to a fireman who appeared in the ward some time later.

That alarm was false, but the patients had no way of knowing and most of them would have required help to get out if there had been a fire.

Dutton said the majority of 33 patients in Alcorn 1 can look after themselves with a little assistance in dressing, and most can walk or get about. But all require varying degrees of personal care.

Two are subject to heart attacks, two are on oxygen, some wander and others are permanent wheelchair cases. They are permitted to smoke in the ward.

Dutton has expressed concern on behalf of his colleagues to Pacific command, Royal Canadian Legion, which has a committee in Victoria monitoring the situation at Memorial Pavilion. But he said nothing has come of their efforts as a result of meeting with the hospital administration.

CARRIER PRINCESS

More Tour Buses

Conmac Stage Lines Ltd., a firm owned by Jerry Conrod and Wayne McArthur, who operate the Victoria Airport Travelodge in Sidney, has asked the provincial government for a licence to operate a charter and tour bus operation in Greater Victoria and to the Mainland.

Taking a gamble, the company has bought 11 buses, eight of them doubledeckers from Derby, England, while awaiting cabinet approval for a transportation licence.

Conrod says he is hoping for a decision this week.

He and McArthur are skilled in the tour bus industry. They owned Tweed Line Tours, which pioneered the use of double-decker buses for Greater Victoria tours before it was bought out by the New Democratic Party government in 1973.

Another four are on order and are expected here in June.

The Daimler buses, which weigh 12 tons each, seat 65 passengers and are later models of those already in service in this area.

The buses cost about $17,000 each when landed in Victoria. McArthur is already in Japan promoting package tours for the new service.

Election Kills Budget Ceiling

The provincial government's five per cent ceiling on municipal budget increases for 1979 appears to have been wiped out by Premier Bennett's election call, Saanich aldermen were told Tuesday night.

"It rather looks like the five per cent limitation will go by default this year," Mayor Mel Couvelier commented at a finance committee meeting.

But the mayor later told reporters Saanich council still intends to do its utmost to keep its budget increase as close as possible to the five per cent figure.

He said it was never made clear whether the limitation was intended merely as a guideline or to have any legislative authority.

In any event, no legislation was placed in front of the House before dissolution. And with the May 10 election to be held just five days before the May 15 deadline for budget adoption, it would be impossible for the government elected to take any such legislative action in time.

Meanwhile, Couvelier said, Saanich is unlikely to get answers from the provincial government's inspector of municipalities on a series of requested exemptions, including the police and fire department budgets.

Earlier Tuesday, council's budget committee approved a $2,387,470 budget for the parks and recreation department, an increase of $207,580 or 9.5 per cent on 1978.

That increase is whittled to only 5.4 per cent, however, if the municipality's new recreation facilities are not included in budget calculations — one of the requested exemptions Saanich had earlier submitted to the government.

Among the major expenditure proposals deleted from the parks and recreation budget in 15 hours of pruning spread over three days were $108,000 for a boulevard tree program and $42,000 from various construction projects.

But it wasn't entirely a hacking day Tuesday. The committee increased by $15,000 (to $819,640) projected revenues from Saanich's recreation facilities.

Couvelier made it clear to recreation officials that he expects an aggressive marketing and promotion approach to encourage better use of the Saanich facilities and make them more competitive with those of other municipalities.

Victoria Makes $1 ½M Trim

City council has managed to pare $1,493,553 from 1979 budget requests by various departments, finance chairman Ald. Murray Glazier said today.

He said the budget now provides for $27,694,407 in expenditures which are subject to the provincial five-per-cent guideline. This compares with $26,883,933 actually spent last year.

"We are $533,723 under the allowable five per cent increase and this figure will change as a number of important policy discussions are made by council in meetings to come," he said.

The city's final budget and mill rate will be set by May 15.

So far major cuts in the budget have been in public works ($613,500), fire department ($483,538), general government ($91,268) and traffic engineering ($82,807).

"Growth in the assessment roll through new construction and increases in city revenues will absorb a fair amount of increase in expenditure without needing any property tax increase, but it is too early to make any forecast of the 1979 mill rate," Glazier said.

More Vote in City

There will be 65,107 eligible voters in Victoria riding and 68,537 in Esquimalt-Saanich riding in the May 22 federal election.

The figure for the Victoria constituency, one of only 16 ridings across Canada whose boundaries are unchanged from the last federal election, is 2,146 higher than the 1974 total of 62,961.

Esquimalt-Saanich returning officer Malcolm Anderson said today comparisons with 1974 are relatively meaningless in that constituency as a result of boundary changes.

Symphony Boss Picked

The former operations manager with the Winnipeg Symphony has been appointed manager of the Victoria Symphony Society.

Robert J. McGifford takes up the post May 1.

Symphony president Dorothy Frost said the appointment is in keeping with a commitment by the symphony board to fiscal responsibility.

McGifford, a chartered accountant, was responsible for the over-all financial management of the Winnipeg Symphony.

This included budgets, fund raising, grant applications, ticket sales and the introduction of a systems approach to data processing.

Prior to his position with the Winnipeg Symphony, McGifford was treasurer of Kensington Consultants Ltd. and assistant international controller of K-Tel International Inc. He is a board member of the Association of Canadian Orchestras.

McGifford will be in Victoria early next week for talks with symphony officials.

$1,008 Robbery

Thieves broke into George's Bavarian at 1021 Pandora overnight and made off with $1,008 that had been left in two desk drawers in a front office.

The theft was discovered by a cleaner at 5:32 a.m.

A city police spokesman said the rear door had been pried open.

Law Building Given Okay

University of Victoria has been given the green light to call tenders for a $6 million law building, it was announced today.

Law Dean Murray Fraser said the $6 million is the total estimated cost, including landscaping, furniture and equipment.

He said the contruction timetable has not been announced but the faculty hopes the building will be completed by September, 1980.

The law faculty was formed four years ago at UVic and is still in its temporary quarters, in the library building.

Fraser said the faculty is badly crowded in the library building but he is delighted this looks like the final year for temporary quarters.

The university has been authorized to call bids and, if they are within projected cost limits, a contract would be awarded.

Fraser said the announcement appears to represent the successful conclusion to a four-year campaign for permanent quarters.

ASK THE TIMES

Q. Can you tell what is futurism. Is it a philosophy? W.J.E.

A. A movement founded by F.T. Marinetti in 1909. It died with him in 1930. It sought to reform all arts and most human activities.

Q. Can you name the leading colleges of music in London, England? I eventually hope to train there. M.B.

A. The Royal Academy of Music, The Royal College of Music and Trinity College of Music.

Christie Enters Race

Victoria lawyer Doug Christie has entered the race for a provincial seat in the Esquimalt-Port Renfrew riding.

Christie, 32, will run as an independent representing the interests of the Committee for Western Independence which he founded four years ago.

The committee, with about 4,000 members, seeks B.C.'s separation from the rest of Canada.

This will be Christie's first election contest as a candidate. He has been associated with the Conservative party for nearly 20 years and is still a member of the party's executive in Esquimalt-Port Renfrew, although not currently active.

Christie will face at least four other candidates. They are Frank Mitchell of the NDP, incumbent Socred Lyle Kahl, Tory Bill Langlois and Wayne Arthur Wiliams, another independent.

Midnight Deadline for Voters

MORTON
. . . clashes with natives

The deadline to register for the provincial election remains at midnight tonight, Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis has announced.

Curtis said despite protests there is no need to extend the registration time and in any case, he would need approval from the legislature to do so.

As a result, voters have just a few hours to be certain they are on the list.

The office has a bank of 10 phones, which can be reached until midnight at 387-5909 or at any one of a series of numbers between 387-1953 and 387-1958.

Curtis said 90 per cent of B.C.'s eligible voters were already on the list before the election was called and almost all the remaining 10 per cent have subsequently been added.

Proof of registration will come in the form of a registration card, which is in the mail and should be delivered today or Thursday at the latest.

Curtis was responding to complaints from the NDP and the United Native Nations.

Yvonne Cocke, a past-president of the provincial NDP, had asked for a one-week extension in the deadline because of continuing confusion in some areas about the registration process.

Many people have not received the registration confirmation cards, she said.

The cards have been sent out as third-class mail at 15 cents instead of 17 cents, and this delayed delivery.

Victoria post office spokesman Buz Sawyer said the cards for local constituencies should all be delivered this week.

Native association vice-president Brian Maracle alleged there are thousands of Indians who had not been registered and Morton was asked for 10,000 application forms so the United Native Nations association could complete the job.

Morton refused and Maracle later called him "a redneck" and asked Premier Bill Bennett to intervene.

In a telegram to the premier, Maracle said between 20,000 and 30,000 people of Indian ancestry have not been registered and asked Bennett to put pressure on Morton to co-operate.

Morton said the accusations were "a damned lie and you can quote me."

He said Indian people had been thoroughly canvassed and it is impossible that 20,000 to 30,000 were left off the list.

Maracle said an Indian representative went to Morton's office to get the 10,000 cards for a voter-registration campaign, was turned down and given a stern lecture by Morton.

"He was told in so many ways that you don't do it this way, you do it our way — or you don't do it at all. He (Morton) is a real redneck."

Morton said the Indian representative "was arrogant as hell."

today's markets

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market fell sharply in active mid-afternoon trading today.

Trading in Brascan Ltd. A resumed shortly before 11 a.m. Edper Equities Ltd. said Tuesday it has withdrawn an offer for 11.7 million shares of Brascan, in part because of Brascan's bid for all outstanding shares of F. W. Woolworth Co. Brascan A rose 1 to $23⅝ by 2 p.m.

The Ontario Securities Commission said it has ordered a 15-day trading ban in securities of All-Can Holdings Ltd., following the arrest of two of the company's officers last week on charges of attempting to affect the public price of All-Can B shares.

The securities commission has obtained an order in the Supreme Court of Canada appointing a receiver and manager of the company. Trading has been halted since last week in All-Can B shares, which last traded at $8⅝.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices lost ground today, registering some apparent disappointment over International Business Machines' quarterly earnings report.

IBM stock was down 3¾ at $316¼, after trading as low as $314.

F. W. Woolworth, meanwhile, traded around $31⅜, up ⅜ from Tuesday, in the over-the-counter market and on regional exchanges. By mid-afternoon the stock had not reopened since the announcement Monday by Brascan Ltd., a Canadian company, of plans to offer $35 a share for it.

Montreal

London

LONDON (Reuter) — The London stock market advanced moderately near the close of light trading today. The Financial Times index rose 1.6 to 537.3. Industrials gained slightly while oils were mixed and mines drifted easier. Canadian shares firmed.

CATTLE

CALGARY (CP) — Receipts to 11 a.m. at the Calgary public stockyards of 725 head saw a heavy supply of good condition slaughter steers trade actively to a broad local and export demand.

Slaughter heifers and cows met a moderate demand. A1-2 slaughter steers sold steady. Slaughter heifers lost $1 with an absence of good condition top-quality heifers. All grades of slaughter cows barely steady with good condition D1 cows scarce. There were no bologna bulls on offer.
